So they brought the colt to Jesus and put their cloaks over it. And he sat on it. Many people spread their cloaks on the road, and others spread leafy branches that they had cut from the fields. - Mk 11:7-8

Social Action

Food Pantry Gardens announce the Witte-Schulte Internship.

This is a valuable learning and networking opportunity that offers an undergraduate student the chance to join an organization producing high quality, nutritious, culturally relevant produce for our neighbors in Dane County, WI. The intern can expect to gain hands-on skills in vegetable and fruit production, small scale farming techniques, volunteer coordination and youth outreach hrough work primarily at Forward Garden located at 7492 Old Sauk Road in Middleton, WI. Named after the founders, Ken Witte and Emmett Schulte, of Madison Area Food Pantry Gardens, it is initially funded by family and friends of Ken and Emmett. For more information about the internship and application instructions go to http://foodpantrygardens.org. Applications close April 15, 2021.

Feeling like you want to do something for others given the needs are so great right now?

Help our local effort to grow fresh produce at three of the member gardens of the Madison Area Food Pantry Gardens- the Lacy, Schulte and Witte Gardens. The Madison Area Food Pantry Gardens is a network of gardens in Dane County which exist to grow healthful fruits and vegetables for distribution through local food pantries and meal programs. Planning work is already underway for this season and volunteers are key to the success of the gardens. Gardening reduces tension, provides an opportunity to exercise while being outside in the fresh air, and allows you to work on a team while helping to reduce hunger in our community with fresh produce. If you are interested in learning more go to foodpantrygardens.org. If you are willing to help at either the Lacy Garden, contact Peg O'Donoghue at pegodonoghue@gmail.com or 217-649-7210; or the Schulte or Witte Gardens, contact Laura Green at laura@cmcmadison.org or 608-441-1180.

Jesus died for my sins, why does the Church teach that I need to make reparations? "It is an immense consolation to many who struggle with the worst sins who, amidst their conversion, begin to glimpse the reality that the mercy of God by means of the sacrifice of Jesus on the cross, the shedding of His Precious Blood, is sufficient to atone for their sins against Christ and His Body the Church. But, if the mercy of God is enough, why does the Catholic Church say that sinners must make an act of reparation? Isn't Jesus' sacrifice to the Eternal Father of his body, blood, soul and divinity enough? Why is reparation necessary?"

"The Catechism of the Catholic Church tells us that Reparation is "Making amends for a wrong done or for an offense, especially for sin" … 'We are obliged to make reparation for personal sins against justice and truth...' (CCC, Glossary)"

The mercy of God fills us with a holy desire to make reparation. His mercy for our own personal sins fills us with a desire to be merciful to others, especially to other sinners. Similarly, those who are forgiven have the desperate need to also forgive those who have trespassed against them. If we can see beyond the "requirement'" aspect of reparation, a miracle can happen in our heart. We can begin to make acts of reparation humbly and with great joy and fervor. This is a powerful moment and the Church is in desperate need of these fervent souls. Acts of reparation unite us to the sacrificial love of Jesus Christ and make us co-workers in the Church's mission of healing and forgiving. Any member of the faithful can do acts of reparation for their own sins or for the sins of others. An act of reparation might be a prayer or a penance done for someone's conversion, some physical pain you might experience offered in union with the Sacred Heart of Jesus, or giving some money or doing another work of mercy for someone in need. https://bismarckdiocese.com/news/jesus-died-for-my-sins-why-does-the-church-teach-that-i-need-to-make-reparation.

Catholic Order Pledges $100 Million to Atone for Slave Labor and Sales. "In one of the largest efforts by an institution to atone for slavery, a prominent order of Catholic priests has vowed to raise $100 million to benefit the descendants of the enslaved people it once owned and to promote racial reconciliation initiatives across the United States. The move by Jesuit priests is the largest such effort by the Roman Catholic Church and comes amid growing calls for reparations across the United States."

"The money raised by the Jesuits will flow into a new foundation established in partnership with a group of descendants, who pressed for negotiations with the Jesuits after learning from a series of articles in The New York Times that their ancestors had been sold in 1838. The order relied on slave labor and slave sales for more than a century to sustain the clergy and to help finance the construction and the day-to-day operations of churches and schools, including the nation's first Catholic institution of higher learning, the college now known as Georgetown University."

"'We now have a pathway forward that has not been traveled before,'" said Mr. Stewart, a retired corporate executive whose ancestors were sold in 1838 to help save Georgetown from financial ruin. "'They did not come running to us, but because we went to them with open arms and open hearts, they responded,'" Mr. Stewart said of the Jesuits. "'They have embraced our vision.'"

"Faith institutions have been at the forefront of the growing reparations movement. In 2018, the Catholic sisters of the Religious of the Sacred Heart, who owned about 150 Black people in Louisiana and Missouri, created a reparations fund to finance scholarships for African-Americans at their school in Grand Coteau, La. The following year, Virginia Theological Seminary, which relied on enslaved laborers, created a $1.7 million reparations fund, and Princeton Theological Seminary announced it would spend $27 million on scholarships and other initiatives to make amends for its ties to slavery. Several Episcopal dioceses with ties to slavery — including ones in Maryland, New York and Texas — have also created reparations funds."https://www.nytimes.com/2021/03/15/us/jesuits-georgetown-reparations-slavery.htmlhttps://www.georgetown.edu/slavery/
