Family Fundamentals

"Faith in the resurrection of Jesus says that there is a future for every human being; the cry for unending life which is a part of the person is indeed answered.

God exists: that is the real message of Easter. Anyone who even begins to grasp what this means also knows what it means to be redeemed."
Pope Benedict XVI

Servite Dominum in Timore

As we continue to examine New Testament passages that illuminate Christ's teaching on the Eucharist, today we come to the Last Supper discourse. At the Mass, the priest prays the words of Christ and effects the substantial change of the bread and wine into Christ's Body and Blood. If we look closely, we notice that the Church retains in the liturgy not an exact transposition of any one account of the Last Supper, but a composite of several. The words which bring about the consecration are commonly called the words of institution. These words are contained in three Gospels and also in Paul's first letter to the Corinthians. St. John has a very long account of the Last Supper in his Gospel, but does not include the words of institution. Perhaps, since he was writing at a later time, he did not feel the need to repeat what the synoptic Gospels had included. Also, St. John's Eucharistic theology is more than clear in his 6th chapter.

Looking at the 4 accounts of the words of institution, there seems to be commonalities between Matthew and Mark, as well as commonalities between Luke and Paul. The variations in these four accounts are slight and do not cause us any concern over error. But the variations help us to see what each writer sought to emphasize and communicate. Paul repeats the phrase, "do this in memory of me" clearly emphasizing Christ's desire for us to imitate what he did at the Last Supper. Complementing that notion is Luke's emphasis on the fact that Christ's Body is offered and His Blood is shed for us, bringing to the fore the sacrificial nature of what our Lord does. Matthew and Luke connect this idea of sacrifice to the wider body of believers, as they say, "for many." These two also appeal to Jewish audiences by connecting Christ's sacrifice with the often-repeated theme of God's covenant with His people which is always sealed in blood.

Seen as a whole, these four accounts help us to understand Christ's full intention for the Eucharist in our lives: it is a sacrificial banquet, meant to be repeated, but also intrinsically connected to the one sufficient sacrifice of Christ for our salvation.

Because the Church does not take only one biblical account of the words of institution for use at the Holy Mass, we are able to be reminded of the whole picture of the significance of the Mass. It is not mere reenactment of the Last Supper, but it makes the whole Paschal mystery present for us!

April 14, 2021

To all Clergy, Religious, and Laity of the Archdiocese of New Orleans,

Dear Sisters and Brothers in Christ:

May the peace and joy of this Easter remain in your hearts.

On April 9, I had the honor of welcoming the statue, "Angels Unawares" to New Orleans. The sculpture, cast in bronze and weighing nearly four tons, is on a tour of American cities before going on permanent display at Catholic University of America. I personally invite you to come and view the statue and find yourself in the images it portrays while it is on temporary display at Notre Dame Seminary.

It is a replica of a statue commissioned by Pope Francis for the World Day of Migrants of Refugees in 2019 and on permanent display at the Vatican. I had the opportunity to see the original the last time I was in Rome and the images are powerful.

The statue shows a 20-foot-long boat crowded with migrants and refugees from various lands. Among the 140 sculpted faces are Italians and Germans seeking a better life in a new country; Irish immigrants escaping the 19th century Potato Famine; Africans who were forced onto slave ships; Vietnamese boat people fleeing a Marxist regime; a Cherokee on the Trail of Tears; Jews scarred by the Holocaust; Syrians seeking a more peaceful home than their homeland, and many others. All figures and faces are from photos of real people or modeled in-studio. Even the Holy Family is in the crowd, identifiable only by St. Joseph's toolbox. Above the figures, stretching 11 feet high, are the wings of an angel meant to symbolize Hebrews 13:2: "Do not neglect to show hospitality to strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

Once again, I invite you to visit the statue on the front yard of Notre Dame Seminary, 2901 S. Carrollton Ave. in New Orleans anytime between now and May 21 when it will depart for the next city on its national tour.

Wishing you God's blessings, I am

Sincerely in Christ,

+ Gregory
