♦♦♦ FROM THE PASTOR ♦♦♦

A wonderful article in Comment Magazine pointed out "The Fading of Forgiveness" in our world. More and more, people race to be seen as the most offended and the most aggrieved. For example, whereas Martin Luther King Jr. asked the black community to forgive racist white people, today's BLM urges people not to forgive, but to use their victimhood. And, whereas Democrats and Republicans used to look to the future and seek compromise; today they assign blame and emphasize past slights--preferring to be right rather than to be reconciled. Today, it seems, being the victim has power; while the unforgiven (or unforgivable) person can be manipulated. As a result, people are little inclined to forgive, and let go of their power.

This change is partially due to our therapeutic culture, which thinks the most important thing is "how I feel". "If all that matters is individual autonomy, then forgiveness and reconciliation--which are designed to foster and maintain community--are of little importance." But it is also due to the increased secularization of our world. Christ showed us that it is more important to love and forgive than to have power. But without the example of Christ suffering and dying, we forget about sacrificial love, and grab for power.

Indeed the future will likely be dark if we Catholics and other Christians do not recover our own theology of forgiveness, and shine forth this light into the world.

So what are these principles of forgiveness? First, forgiveness needs to be seen not primarily as an emotion, but instead as a set of practices in response to hurts that we experience. Forgiveness is often granted before it is felt. In the confessional, I frequently urge people to make a choice to forgive; and then to act on it by praying for the other person. Thus, every time that I smile at the person who has wronged me, I am acting in forgiveness, even if I may not be feeling it yet.

Second, the more that we understand our own sinfulness, and the greater we understand God's goodness to ourselves, the easier it will be to give that gift to others. "I deserve hell, but God didn't treat me as I deserve!" So, the great Saints of the Church would say, "the more you focus on your own sins, the less you will worry about the sins of others."

Third, the ultimate goal of forgiveness is a reconciled relationship. We are destined some day to be together forever in heaven. A true Christian love hasn't truly become complete if we still maintain division. Believe me, I understand that this type of reconciliation can take a long time--perhaps even a lifetime. Trust is easy to break down, and hard to build back up. But it should still be our goal, as it is Our Lord Jesus' goal that we "all be one" (John 17).

EUCHARISTIC ADORATION

STARTING THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 9TH ADORATION WILL BE FROM 12:30PM-8:30PM THURSDAYS

Sign-up sheets are in the entryways. If you are not already signed up, please prayerfully consider signing up for an hour so we don't have any worries about coverage.

The hourly sign-in sheet is again in the back of the church, we ask that you please sign in when you attend Adoration, even if you are not committed to that hour each week, and even if someone else has already signed in as sometimes emergencies arise and a person has to leave. Also hopefully we'll have more than one person committed to every hour soon. The more interest that is evident, the more likely we are to be able to expand the hours. Please call the office for questions or to signup

WE EXTEND A WARM WELCOME to the Juan and Ana Guerrero-Landeros Family.
Welcome to Sacred Heart Parish!
