Memorial Donations

Flowers, although pretty for a short time, are gone far too soon. A memorial donation instead of flowers is a way to remember a friend or a family member who has been a part of the Senior Center. This will benefit the Center for a long time.

Conduct at the Davison-Richfield Area Senior Citizens Activity Center...

We all have different personalities and behaviors. It is what makes us who we are! In a large group of people sometimes our unique qualities will clash with one another. At the Davison-Richfield Area Senior Citizens Activity Center everyone is expected to treat each other with respect. Keep hurtful opinions to yourself. When confronted with inappropriate behavior please bring it to the attention of the staff to be dealt with. We have a beautiful facility and wonderful people attending. When everyone works together and respects each other we maintain this beautiful quality.

What has not changed now that I am fully vaccinated?

The coronavirus is a new virus and the vaccines are new, so we are still learning more and more as each day passes. For example, questions remain about how well COVID-19 vaccines protect against the new variants of the virus that are spreading across the U.S. In addition, we are still learning about how well the vaccine keeps people from spreading the disease. Early data show that the vaccines may help keep people from spreading COVID-19, but we don't know to what extent.

For now, the CDC recommends that fully vaccinated people should continue to:

- ⇒ Take precautions in public like wearing a well-fitted mask and physical distancing
- ⇒ Wear masks, practice physical distancing, and adhere to other prevention measures when visiting with unvaccinated people who are at increased risk for severe COVID-19 disease
- ⇒ Wear masks, maintain physical distance, and practice other prevention measures when visiting with unvaccinated people from more than one household
- ⇒ Avoid medium– and large-sized in-person gatherings
- ⇒ Get tested if experiencing COVID-19 symptoms
- ⇒ Follow guidance issued by individual employers
- ⇒ Follow CDC and local health department travel requirements and recommendations

Let's keep everyone safe, do your part!

SCAM ALERT!

Are You Sure That's Your Bank Reaching Out?

How it works— By telephone, a call from someone claiming to be with your bank or other financial institution warns of suspicious account activity. They may even have some personal information, like the last four digits of your Social Security number. By email, you receive a message that looks legitimate—complete with the bank's logo, directing you to click a link to take care of an urgent matter. By text, a message seemingly from your bank urges you to click a link to address an issue.

What you should know—Between social media and data breaches, there's enough information floating around to help a scammer craft a personalized message that seems entirely legitimate. Scammers often use scare tactics to get us to react emotionally—like claiming they have detected fraud on our account—making it difficult to access our logical thinking processes.

What you should do—Greet any message from your bank with caution—ask yourself, "Would my bank really text me?". If you do get an email, a text or a phone call claiming to be from your bank, don't interact. Look at an account statement or the back of your credit or debit card for a number you can call to determine if the bank is trying to reach you. If you, like so many others, are now banking online, protect your accounts by using unique passwords, opting for your bank's app if available for added security, and enabling two-factor authentication—the bank will send you a one-time code when logging in to ensure it's you accessing the account.

Knowledge gives you power over scams!

8 Tips to Scam-Proof Your Life Amid COVID-19

Crooks capitalizing on the crisis want your cash and personal data. Even a pandemic isn't enough to deter scammers from going after your money and identity. Here are eight tips from fraud experts to protect you during the coronavirus outbreak.

1. Be extremely careful when shopping online. Before you place a digital order with an unfamiliar store, check out the company or product online first, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) urges. Complaints about online shopping made to the consumer-protection agency rank first among the nearly 115,000 coronavirus-related fraud reports this year, says the FTC's Colleen Tressler. Online shopping complaints skyrocketed in April & May, when more than half the people complaining said they never got what they ordered. Early on, shady sellers set up websites offering hard-to-find products such as masks, sanitizer, toilet paper, thermometers and gloves. Sellers blamed the pandemic for shipping delays, then defective items or products not in the size ordered.
2. Be wary of strange texts, calls and emails. Scammers reach out any way they can, including through social media, Some bad actors even show up at your door. The number of complaints about violations of the National Do Not Call Registry "are starting to pick up again after months of decline," Tressler says. "As the scammers take to the phones again, you can expect to see an uptick in popular phone scams."
3. Be sure your computer's antivirus and anti-malware software is up to date. Computer tech-support scams are "ever popular," Tresslers says. Con artists try to convince you that you have a virus or other serious problem affecting your computer; just keep in mind that "you don't need to fix" a problem that doesn't exist, she says. Use extreme caution when payment is sought through gift, prepaid or reload cards, wire transfers or money-transfer apps.
4. Be aware: Imposters wear many hats. They pose as representatives of government agencies: Social Security, the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, the Internal Revenue Service, the Census Bureau and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, to name a few. Or they may masquerade as a family member in need of quick cash for an emergency. Or as a would-be romantic interest who chats with you several times a day.
5. Be sure to turn down pitches for quack COVID-19 cures and treatments. The FTC has sent nearly 300 warning letters to companies making false claims about products that supposedly will prevent or combat COVID-19. "If there is a medical breakthrough, you are not going to hear about if for the first time from an ad or a sales pitch,," according to Tressler, who said that the overwhelming majority of firms comply after receiving warnings.
6. Be careful if you hear from a contact tracer. Don't pay one. Don't give out your Social Security number or financial information. Don't share your immigration status. And don't click on links or download anything sent by a supposed contact tracer. Check with your state health department to see if there is a way to make sure the person who is contacting you about possible exposure to someone with COVID-19 is authentic. Otherwise, hang up, close the door, and don't respond to, click on or download anything in an email or text. Then report the incident to your state and tell the FTC about if at ftc.gov/complaint.
7. Be firm about not giving to a charity that seeks a contribution in cash, a wire transfer or via gift cards. "Those are sure signs of a scam," Tressler says. Additionally, you may research charities free of charge through the nonprofit Charity Navigator https://www.charitynavigator.org
8. Be vigilant about protecting your credit. Be sure to dispute any inaccuracies that show up.
