REST IN PEACE

parishioner.

DEAR PARISHIONERS,

From the very beginning of time, humankind was created to be a social species. Mating and offspring are and remain an integral part of the life cycle. Generation builds upon generation to the present day. However, unique among our human species is the fact that we are resolved to live in a monogamous relationship with one spouse and we nurture our offspring for an extended amount of time.

On this feast of the Holy Family we take a moment in our faith tradition and in our faith expression to gaze upon the loveliness of the Holy Family. We also ponder the powerful love of God because He has become one with us in and through Jesus, the Christ child. God sanctifies the core of human love relationships by becoming part of the family nucleus. By doing this, we cannot help but to reflect upon the structure and relationship of family.

Scripture tells us that love is sacrificial, selfless, atoning - a far cry from the world's definition of love! Within the family, God call us to love by honoring and obeying those placed in authority over us. God has also made some amazing promises for our obedience. When we honor our parents, we lay up heavenly treasures; our prayers are heard; we even participate in the atonement for our sins.

Conversely, God expects parents to exercise appropriate authority over the children placed in their care. Too often parents want their children to love them so much that they hesitate to exercise their God-given authority. But a good relationship between parents and children involve an expectation that the children will honor their parents. In this respect, Mary and Joseph are model parents.

Undoubtedly, Mary and Joseph had to teach Jesus what it meant to honor them. As the child Jesus learned how to honor and listen to his earthly parents, he grew in his ability to hear from his heavenly Father as well. Likewise, teaching our children to honor us as parents paves the way for them to honor and hear from God, their heavenly Father.

Inspired by Joseph and Mary but also encouraged by our Church, the role of parents as educators and examples to their children is very important. Church documents from the Second Vatican Council tell us,

"Since parents have conferred life on their children, they have a most solemn obligation to educate their offspring. Hence, parents must be acknowledged as the first and foremost educators of their children. Their role as educators is so decisive that scarcely anything can compensate for their failure in it. For it devolves on parents to create a family atmosphere so animated with love and reverence for God and others that a well-rounded personal and social development will be fostered among children. Hence, the family is the first school of those social virtues which every society needs."

In a sense the Church not only reaffirms the importance and place of the family structure within society; not only emphasizes the overwhelming significance of a strong marriage between father and mother of the children but also tells us the role of being a parent is a sacred duty that is irreplaceable and incapable of being entirely delegated to others or usurped by others.

Many of us are familiar with the fact that family life can be quite trying. Conflicts, tensions, anger, and frustration are just as evident as the love and communion that a family share. Aware that we all know and appreciate the virtues needed for peaceful family living which include patience, purity and charity, I believe that we can attain these virtues if we but become families of prayer - "The family that prays together, stays together." Family prayer is that which binds a family together with each other and with God. So, as we prepare to make our "New Year" resolutions perhaps we could consider making a family resolution to pray more frequently together.

My hope for you as Catholic Families, as we celebrate this Feast of the Holy Family, is that you recreate, recover, review and renew the practices of family prayer in your household so that the presence of God may become more apparent in your homes and in your hearts.

On this feast of the Holy Family, let us pray for all families throughout the world. May God's grace be yours and may the image of the Holy Family be a model of faith for your family to follow. May all families come to reflect more fully the love that Jesus, Mary and Joseph had for each other.

Blessings and Peace,
Fr. Phil
