Gospel Reflections... Being Free Of Distractions and Anxiety

Our readings this weekend are perfect if you feel your soul is all together too noisy.

We know what this noise sounds like as we have lots of work to do but have to constantly rearrange our life due to COVID and now snow storms. Most of us love routines and we have been in a pattern of constantly losing our routines.

Some of our disquiet is because we watch or listen to a lot of news and talk radio. The word 'news' should probably be replaced by the word 'sensational' or 'dire' as these information feeds are perfectly willing to be repetitive while searching their thesaurus for the most emotional words they can find. If people want to be in the news, they feel they need to say and do things that are extreme to get their face on screens.

It is important to note that in the Gospel, such a loud voice was associated with an 'unclean spirit'.

So the Gospel shows us the best path to restoring peace: ask Jesus for help. He will cry out 'QUIET, Come out of him/her' and the unclean spirit that is making all of the noise will come out.

The other option comes from our second reading where Paul explains how he already lives in heaven while here on Earth. He has made systematic changes to have fellow mystics around him. Here he fundamentally introduces the call to celibacy, monastery and various charisms of religious community.

Recently I moved my prayer space to the basement as it was even quieter and less distracting than my other locations in my house. I can leave the temptation to look out the window at people shoveling snow, or school parents parking and have before me only an image or two of Jesus Christ.

What is your path to casting out the unclean spirit of noise? No you can't send your children to the parish offices. Pray about it and God will give you at least moments to have quiet prayer as God is as eager to have this conversation with us as we are with him.

We have Eucharistic Adoration at St. Columbkille church on Thursdays from 6 to 7 p.m. At St. Katharine Drexel we are training people to use the key fob system to get away to the Eucharistic chapel. If you wish to be a part of this contact me at 920-887-2082 ext. 302.

Blessings and quiet,

Fr. Michael Erwin
