Life's Little Irritations

Do you ever find that the little irritations that get thrown your way, weigh heavily on you? I know that at times there are situations that weigh me down.

Someone can say something that really irritates me, or it can be how someone handles a situation. Instead of reasonably talking things out, asking how things can be worked out to the advantage of both parties, its anger or a display of disrespect from one of the people involved.

I stand back and wonder, what has happened to us? What has happened to the one on one conversations? Today it's texting or emails or sending messages through another person. How do things really get resolved without that one on one conversation?

I look at my small world around me and see so many life changing things happening. I have friends that have life debilitating illnesses, family members who have suffered from abuse, families who are struggling to keep food on their table.

While Jesus was here on earth, he could have expressed his righteous anger or frustration throughout His life, yet he didn't. He reached out in love to everyone. Jesus even asked His Father to forgive those who put Him to death.

We surely should be able to rise above our own small irritations and ask Him to help us, to help us open our hearts and show our love and forgiveness to one another. To work together in harmony.

"Dear Jesus, help me to rise above the trivial grievances that get in the way of following You."

Peace and God's Blessings to you!
