TRANSFORM GREED INTO GRATITUDE

GOSPEL MEDITATION

What makes us feel secure? Many people look to tangible forms of security that will safeguard their livelihood and prepare for their future. We tend to associate security with things: the accumulation of goods and possessions, retirement funds, savings accounts, and substantial incomes. While acquiring these promises a life with less anxiety and worry, we actually find ourselves more preoccupied and consumed with their growth and preservation. We worry more! We can easily become quasi-hoarders, consumed with obtaining more tangible crutches. Our minds and hearts are always restless, and we never seem to be at peace.

Why do we so easily give our self-worth, value, and sense of security over to things? God certainly does not deny us the pursuit of a productive and enjoyable life but there do we draw the line? A sense of wellbeing and happiness can easily get deferred to sometime "in the future" while we continue to wrestle with the toils of today. There is no guarantee that there will be an earthly tomorrow and all of the frenzy we bring to securing our state in life will be for naught. When we are called from this world, will we even know where to begin to look for the tranquility and repose our souls so desperately need?

We cannot be hoarders, pursuers of vanity, or greedy. They just don't work as they are too dependent on things that can fall apart. Rather than always feeling the need for more, we need to learn how to be grateful for what we have. By learning to look inward we can learn how to live lives of faithful service to others. "Happiness can only be achieved by looking inward and learning to enjoy whatever life has, and this requires transforming greed into gratitude (St. John Chrysostom)." We all need to be good stewards of what has been entrusted to our care. Grateful hearts recognize the true source of what we have and realize that our true treasure lies not in what matters to us but to God.

INSPIRATION FOR THE WEEK

Greed is more present and powerful in our lives than we care to admit. We like our "stuff" and are hesitant to part with it. What we convince ourselves that we really need, we really do not. If everything we own is taken away from us tomorrow, life will continue. We will find happiness again. How many relationships are ruined because of inheritance issues? Our possessions cannot come with us when we die. Why do we foolishly think that we cannot live without them here? Wealth and happiness do not have physical origins. True wealth and happiness are gifts of God's kingdom and matters of heart and soul. We are much more than what we possess, and freed is more real and operative than we think. Let us begin our journey to detachment with an honest admission. We often place more importance on things than on people and God. Ask God to accept our conflicted hearts and give us the courage to do things differently.

IMMIGRANT AND REFUGEE MINISTRY

In today's Gospel, the rich man failed to share his abundance with others. In keeping wealth only for himself he revealed that he was "not rich in what matters to God." God is rich in love because God is love itself. Since we reside in God's love, we want to share what we have with others.

Are you able to be more supportive of those in need? Does the saying "live simply so others can simply live" resonate with you? If the world is to be a decent place for the poor, the outcast, the oppressed, and the persecuted, we can not only hope for it, we must help make it so. Please consider helping the Immigrant and Refugee Ministry (IRM) of Old St. Pat's. Thanks in advance for your generosity.

To gain a richer understanding of the many assimilation difficulties facing newly arrived immigrants, refugees and asylum seekers, you may want to read Refugee High: Coming of Age in America by Elly Fishman. The book is set at Sullivan High School in Chicago's Rogers Park neighborhood where many of the families helped by OSP reside.

Catholic Climate Covenant and Recent Supreme Court Decision

"The climate crisis is one of the greatest manifestations of our lack of care [for our common home], resulting in ever more devasting and disruptive weather events causing profound human suffering."

- Jose Agato, Executive Director, Catholic Climate Covenant

On June 30, 2022, the Supreme Court of the United States issued a decision in the case of West Virginia v EPA. The majority, in a 6-3 vote, found that the EPA did not have the authority to regulate CO2 emissions from coal fired power plants under one of the provisions of the Clean Air Act of 1970. The court found that the EPA needed specific authority from Congress to make rules that would transform an industry, like eliminating coal fired power plants from the electrical power generating industry, as a solution to a specific problem.

Jose Agato, Executive Director of Catholic Climate Covenant, notes that the release of the greenhouse gas CO2 from coal fired power plants is a major cause of our current climate crisis. As a result of these emissions, the world now experiences more devastating storms and hurricanes, more frequent and more deadly flooding, and increasing drought and wildfires. These climate disasters hit the poorer citizens of the earth most powerfully. And this disappointing ruling comes at critical time, when the window for implementing change before climate consequences get even more deadly, is limited. Clearly, the decision to restrict the EPA's authority in this area will reduce our country's ability to address the climate crisis. And our country is the major emitter world wide of greenhouse gases, so the world is looking us to take action. Certainly, this ruling is not consistent with the principles of Laudato Si, which calls upon all of us to undertake an ecological conversion, in order to care for our common home.

So, what is a Catholic who is committed to the message of Laudato Si to do? Here are some actions to consider.

- Send an email to your Senators supporting legislation that promotes investment in clean energy, transportation electrification, climate resilience, environmental justice and jobs. The Union of Concern Scientists sample has created a sample email with wording you can personalize. https://secure.ucsusa.org/a/2022-scotus- decision-senate-act-on-climate
- Join one of the local or national environmental groups that support environmental justice and action on climate change. Catholic Climate Covenant, the Sierra Club, the Environmental Defense Fund, 350.org, and the National Resources Defense Council are some of these groups, but there are many others. Faith in Place and the Illinois Environmental Council are two local groups.
- Follow local and national environmental issues; connect with your national, state, and local representatives; write letters to the editor; and talk to friends and neighbors. Many of the organizations above offer training on effective messaging to politicians and local media.
- Vote and urge others to vote. Include environmental positions in your evaluation of candidates.
- As Jose Agato puts it, "pray our nation find innovative ways to answer the call to care for creation for all families and all neighbors, especially those most impacted by the climate crisis."

Our future, and the future of our common home, depends on it.

Catholic Climate Covenant Care for Creation. Care for the Poor.

Reflection by Helen Pygon

If I were to sum up Worktour with one word it would be community. The entire experience is centered around building a community within the Foundations teens and serving the community that we traveled to. Because the entire week is so immersive, it allows one to slow down and completely disconnect from the craziness that is everyday life. You are able to form incredible strong bonds with people that may have been complete strangers in the beginning of the week. The friendships that I have built on Worktour will stay with me forever.

One of the biggest parts of Worktour is the service to the community: in this case, Memphis. Before this week, my only knowledge of Memphis was surface level: Elvis, MLK's assassination, and BBQ. Little did I know of the deep and vibrant history that Memphis has as well as the extreme poverty and social justice issues that it struggles with everyday. My peers and I were exposed to this through our work with Memphis Athletic Ministries (MAM). Through this organization, we worked with children from Memphis ranging from ages 8-14. Although we taught them lessons in math, bible studies, and English, they were the ones teaching us about the inequalities in Memphis. Because of these children, we saw the effects of housing, education, and resource inequality that had strong ties with racial injustice. Even though I have had education in systemic racism in the US and how it affects the youth in our country, MAM forced us to face the problem on a personal level as we met and formed relationships with the children who were most affected by it. Our work with MAM greatly broadened our horizons and gave many of us a new perspective on the social justice issues in this area.

Another key aspect of Worktour is the Wednesday free day, which in Memphis was spent at the National Civil Rights Museum. For me, this experience was one of the most profound of the entire trip. As I said before, my understanding of the Civil Rights Movement and Memphis's connection to it was surface level at best. Thus, I was deeply shocked and moved by the museum. Through various media platforms- videos, police testimonies, songs, letters, clothing- the museum greatly educated me and gave me a new perspective on the importance of our work. For the rest of the week, I kept in mind what I had learned at the museum and how it connected to our work across the community of Memphis.

I will be forever grateful for the opportunity to go on the Memphis Worktour because of the growth I experienced, the friends I made, and the community I built in OSP. Thank you to all the leaders who make trips like this possible and especially Courtney who works so hard to make Foundations an open and loving environment where everyone is comfortable and encouraged to be themselves. We are all so appreciative of your radical inclusivity and your ability to create a space where difficult conversations can be had about our world, our faith, and our place in it.

As a foundation alum, Worktour has been and continues to be one of the best weeks of my year. Having the opportunity to truly slow down, be intentional about my relationship with God and those around me, and learn about and dive into social justice issues- all while laughing until tears with 21 teenagers- reminds me what it is that is important to me. I am so grateful for this opportunity every summer, and I already can't wait until next year! - Kay Thursby

Saint Ignatius of Loyola Saint of the Day for July 31, 2022

Saint Ignatius of Loyola's Story

The founder of the Jesuits was on his way to military fame and fortune when a cannon ball shattered his leg. Because there were no books of romance on hand during his convalescence, Ignatius whiled away the time reading a life of Christ and lives of the saints. His conscience was deeply touched, and a long, painful turning to Christ began. Having seen the Mother of God in a vision, he made a pilgrimage to her shrine at Montserrat near Barcelona. He remained for almost a year at nearby Manresa, sometimes with the Dominicans, sometimes in a pauper's hospice, often in a cave in the hills praying. After a period of great peace of mind, he went through a harrowing trial of scruples. There was no comfort in anything—prayer, fasting, sacraments, penance. At length, his peace of mind

It was during this year of conversion that Ignatius began to write down material that later became his greatest work, the Spiritual Exercises.

He finally achieved his purpose of going to the Holy Land, but could not remain, as he planned, because of the hostility of the Turks. Ignatius spent the next 11 years in various European universities, studying with great difficulty, beginning almost as a child. Like many others, his orthodoxy was questioned; Ignatius was twice jailed for brief periods.

In 1534, at the age of 43, he and six others—one of whom was Saint Francis Xavier—vowed to live in poverty and chastity and to go to the Holy Land. If this became impossible, they vowed to offer themselves to the apostolic service of the pope. The latter became the only choice. Four years later Ignatius made the association permanent. The new Society of Jesus was approved by Pope Paul III, and Ignatius was elected to serve as the first general.

When companions were sent on various missions by the pope, Ignatius remained in Rome, consolidating the new venture, but still finding time to found homes for orphans, catechumens, and penitents. He founded the Roman College, intended to be the model of all other colleges of the Society.

Ignatius was a true mystic. He centered his spiritual life on the essential foundations of Christianity—the Trinity, Christ, the Eucharist. His spirituality is expressed in the Jesuit motto, Ad majorem Dei gloriam—"for the greater glory of God". In his concept, obedience was to be the prominent virtue, to assure the effectiveness and mobility of his men. All activity was to be guided by a true love of the Church and unconditional obedience to the Holy Father, for which reason all professed members took a fourth vow to go wherever the pope should send them for the salvation of souls.
