The Gift of a Future

The scripture readings today show us there's hope in the future. God can give us what we need to move forward, to begin again, and see things differently.

In fact, today we'll hear what the Lord says through Isaiah the prophet: "Remember not the events of the past, the things of long ago consider not; see, I am doing something new!" (Isaiah 43:18-19). During hard and desperate times, when things seemed hopeless, God was encouraging the Israelites to hold on. (With everything happening now in Ukraine, it resonates with us.) Through Isaiah, God was reminding them he will open a way, just like he did in the past. He compares this to their desert experience. We can get easily lost traveling through a desert and end up going in circles because everything looks the same. What God said he'll do is pave a pathway so they could keep going forward.

That becomes a metaphor for the spiritual life. They're words of hope as we journey through Lent and tackle some of the things in our lives we're hoping to change or overcome. We can seem to get stuck in a cycle or pattern of bad habits, which can easily happen in the ways we react emotionally to situations. Unless we change the pattern, it can feel like we're going in circles.

Maybe we've become highly negative or more angry than normal only for this to become our "new normal." Maybe we're more easily falling into despair about things we don't have instead of focusing on what we do have. Maybe we've found ourselves trapped in habits that are addictive, and we're seeing more clearly how it's affecting our relationships. We need a path forward. And the good news is that God can provide it.

In the gospel, the crowd is angry and ready to stone a woman caught in adultery. Emotions are high and people are ready to act. They're all caught in a pattern of behavior that they're used to, maybe without thinking about it. They just act.

Jesus is the one, though, who was able to make a path forward. He broke the pattern and the cycle by doing something new. He diffused the anger by interrupting the pattern: he gave the crowd time to think. He had everyone think about their own brokenness, their own imperfection, and their own need for mercy. And one by one, the crowd dropped their stones and walked away. Jesus stopped them long enough to allow them to think before they acted. It made the difference.

Time was also what Jesus gave the woman. She had to wait it through, too. Maybe to her surprise, instead of condemning her Jesus freed her. He gave her mercy and let her determine the next step. The future was hers to go from there. We don't know if she changed or not, but the path was open for it to happen.

And it's open to us, too. Reconciliation is a Sacrament of healing. We don't have to stay in the past or be defined by it. God gives us something new and something only God can give: a future to begin again. The only thing we need to do is open our heart to it and let God show us a path forward. God is the one who restores hope for a new day.

—John 8:7

Excerpts from the Lectionary for Mass ©2001, 1998, 1970 CCD

We love to make examples out of those who have erred and done wrong. Publicly punishing others serves as a means of demonstrating the consequences for what is deemed inappropriate or wrongful behavior. While this may appear an effective way of achieving conformity to established rules, it runs the real risk of distorting motivation. Obviously, we want people to do what is right and pursue healthy, virtuous behaviors and ideals. But is fear of punishment ever the best motivation for avoiding one action in favor of another?

Doing something out of fear is never healthy. Focusing exclusively on our behavior and what others expect or think, leads to living life with a self-focused superficiality. We become more concerned about protecting ourselves from something negative and unpleasant, than investing ourselves in the freedom, wonder and awe of being human! We can still find our way to the unacceptable or inappropriate behavior as long as we do not get caught! Being a whole, focused, and God-centered human being requires more. It demands an investment of the heart. Virtuous, moral, and mature lifestyles reflective of the Gospel necessitate love.

When we experience and recognize love, God’s unconditional love, in the depth of our soul, we fall in love with what we have found. We then find ourselves leaving destructive and sinful actions behind in search of something more holy, dignified, true, integral, and loving. This is really “mercy realized.” God’s tremendous, loving, eternal forgiveness and willingness to bring us back to something more real and tender is transformational. The respect for myself that I receive from God is so life changing that it causes me to run quickly away from anything sinful and self-destructive to things that are whole and holy.

There are many people who want nothing more than to judge or criticize us. What would actually stoning the woman caught in adultery really accomplish? Nothing more than the inflation of the already self-righteous egos of a few men who think they have power. They have no power because they are sinners too, just like everyone else. What all of us have is the humble ability to express sorrow for pursuing destructive thoughts and actions and receive the power of God’s mercy. Then, Jesus’ request to “go and sin no more” will be one we proudly heed and follow.

The Gift of Counsel

By Ron Rolheiser, OMI

There is a striking parallel in the bible between two stories. In each, an innocent woman, threatened by crowd, is saved because one person intervenes, gives counsel, and alters things. The stories, however, end differently, one manifesting the gift of counsel considerably more than the other.

The first is the story of Daniel, saving the beautiful, innocent Susanna. It goes this way: One day, two elderly men see Susanna taking a bath and lust after her. They approach her with their evil intent, but she rejects them, holding firm to virtue. Bitter and jealous of her power, they falsely accuse her of committing adultery, turning both the crowd and the ancient law against her. She is condemned to die and is being led to her death when Daniel, seized by the Holy Spirit, confronts the crowd. He gives counsel. He accuses the two men of lying and to prove his point has them separated and questioned separately. Of course, they contradict each other, proving Susanna's innocence. Daniel, though, is not finished. He turns the crowd against the accusers, demanding their deaths, and the crowd, in a frenzy of emotion, oblige. The two men are stoned to death, the very death they had decreed for Susanna.

There is in this story a moment of true counsel, the moment when Daniel is seized by the Holy Spirit and protests the innocence of Susanna. But there is also a moment when the Holy Spirit is no longer offering the counsel, that moment when Daniel incites the crowd against the false accusers.

How parallel, yet different, is the story of Jesus, calmly backing down the accusers of the woman caught in adultery! A woman is condemned to die, accused of adultery. Unlike Susanna, this woman is guilty, but that is incidental to what is happening. Clearly, like Susanna, she is there because of jealousy and mob frenzy and is therefore structurally innocent, innocent of the mob frenzy, despite her guilt. And Jesus, like Daniel, confronts the crowd on the basis of the gift of counsel, the Holy Spirit working through him. His protest to the crowd is more powerful than Daniel's - "Let the one who is without sin cast the first stone!" - and it also has a different effect.

Like Susanna, the woman is saved, but no mob scene follows. What ensues is the exact opposite of lynch-mob hysteria: "They all went away one by one, beginning with the eldest" Jesus' counsel not only saves a woman, but also, analogous to the defusing of a bomb, deflates a potential explosion. Nobody dies that day. The counsel of the Holy Spirit prevails. This gift, as Jesus manifests it, not only advocates for someone who is innocent (the role of the Paraclete), but it also, because it takes origins in the love within the Trinity, exposes the roots of violence - jealousy and a mob.

In these two stories we see the gift of counsel, the third gift of the Holy Spirit, manifest imperfectly in Daniel, perfectly in Jesus. What is this gift?

Theologically, counsel is the gift of the Holy Spirit that perfects the virtue of prudence, helping us to judge properly and giving us the insight to know what to do and say in all situations, especially difficult ones. Some manuals describe it as the gift of supernatural intuition.

At a street-level, this simply means giving good advice. Most of us identify counsel with prudence, which we then define as good judgment, common sense, or good practical judgment ... and soon notice it is a rather rare commodity! Valuable though human prudence is, it is not exactly the gift of counsel.

As revealed in Scripture and manifest in the story of Jesus saving the woman taken in adultery, counsel has two interpenetrating aspects: divine wisdom in knowing what to say in a difficult situation ("When you are arrested and dragged before Kings on my account, don't worry about what you will say. It will be given you in that moment") and divine insight in understanding the roots of violence and where God stands within that. ("After I die, I will send you a Paraclete, an Advocate, to help you to understand all these things.")

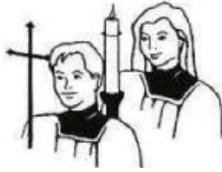

Prudence cannot be taught, counsel is a gift and one either has it or does not.

That is true, but there is more: The kind of prudence and counsel that Jesus revealed in diffusing the crowd and saving the woman taken in adultery, cannot be taught or learned. Scripture tells us it is something given only "when we raise our eyes to heaven" and, through deep prayer, put our hearts into the flow of compassion and gratitude that passes between the Father and the Son. To the extent we do this we will, first, begin to see and protest the innocence of others who are being persecuted; later, when the gift has grown, we will, like Jesus, be able to have the kind of insight and offer the type of counsel that defuses chaos because it points out exactly where God, and we ourselves, stand.

What's new in Scouts?
Is it still Cub Scouts? Is it Boy Scouts? What do they do?
How old do you have to be? Is it just for boys?

Cub Scouts are now for boys AND girls between kindergarten and fifth grade. There are boy dens and girl dens in the same Pack doing things like the Pinewood derby, crafts and introduction to outdoor adventures with their dens and families.

What you remember as Boy Scouts is now: Scouts BSA and includes boys and girls from 11 - 18 years of age. It is not a co-ed program. There are boy troops and girl troops. Sometimes they form a partnership and have the same sponsoring organization working together at times. The activities are similar, and both have the opportunity to earn merit badges and the rank of Eagle Scout.

So, what Scouts are at St Hubert?

Currently and for over 45 years, St Hubert has sponsored Boy Scout Troop 399. (now Scout BSA Troop 399) with a proud roster of over 95 Eagle Scouts. It is our goal to form a girl BSA troop as soon as possible. We are actively recruiting this spring and have an information meeting set for Monday, April 11th at 7:30 in the lower level of the church.

It is also our goal to re-start Pack 399 for the Cub Scouts. We will hold an information night on April 27 at 7:00 in the lower level of the church. Watch for more information in the near future.

You do not need to be a member of St Hubert to join these Scout groups.

USCCB DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, PEACE & HUMAN DEVELOPMENT

Action Alert

From the beginning of Catholic Social Teaching and until today, we as Catholics are deeply committed to building economies that put people before profits. Just earlier this year, Pope Francis stated, "Today, we should ask ourselves what we can do to recover the value of work; and what contribution we can make, as Church, [to ensure] that work can be redeemed from the logic of mere profit and can be experienced as a fundamental right and duty of the person, which expresses and increases his or her dignity."

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (S. 1486) would make the workplace safer for pregnant workers and their unborn children by requiring employers to provide pregnant employees with reasonable accommodations. Common requests made by pregnant women include a chair for jobs that require long periods of standing up, a modified schedule, light duty for jobs that require heavy lifting, being able to carry a bottle of water, or permission to take additional breaks to use the restroom or drink water.

Unfortunately, the current legal landscape does not require employers to provide pregnant workers with reasonable accommodations. Consequently, some pregnant workers are denied such temporary accommodations and are forced to take leave, are terminated, or experience other forms of retaliation. No woman should be forced to risk her or her child's health, miscarriage, preterm birth, economic security or losing insurance by being denied a short-term, reasonable, pregnancy-related accommodation.

Please take action today and encourage your U.S. Senators to protect pregnant workers by advancing the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. Go to: <https://www.votervoice.net/USCCB/campaigns/92713/respond>

If you have personal experience with the denial of workplace accommodations during pregnancy, we encourage you to include it in your message.
