Don't Be Afraid, It's a Team Effort

We happen to have the best adorers around! They show up on time, stay the full hour, cover for each other, and get their own substitutes because they love Jesus in the Blessed Sacrament and wouldn't think of leaving Him alone. When the snowbirds leave for the winter, there is always someone ready to step up and fill in a needed hour. When the snowbirds return and the younger families take off for the summer, the Chapel is always covered.

Many hours are covered by more than one person. Several of our Adorers, because of their schedules, can't commit to Adoration every week, but Registered knowing that with other Adorers present during their same time slot, there would always be someone with Jesus and they wouldn't feel guilty. That's what it's about, a TEAM EFFORT!

Because it's a TEAM EFFORT, don't hesitate to sign up. DO IT NOW! Know that there is always someone ready to help if you can't make it every week.

Join the TEAM! Currently, there is one empty hour, Thursday 4-5 am.

We currently are trying to strengthen the following hours with partners:

Tuesday Midnight-1:00 am

Thursday 9-10:00 pm

Friday 4-5:00 pm & Friday 8-9:00 pm

Saturday 5-6:00 pm & Saturday 7-8:00 pm

The Adoration Chapel is open 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. To sign up for an hour please email us at VisitationAdorationChapel@gmail.com or contact Joan Taylor at 630-530-8963 or Owen & Gail Hilding at 630 573 0033 to register.

Mass Intentions

Our priests will offer a Mass for several reasons: in thanksgiving, for the intentions of another person (such as on a birthday), or, as is most common, for the repose of the soul of someone who has died. One must never forget the infinite graces that flow from the Sacrifice of the Mass which benefit one's soul.

To have a Mass said, please stop by the rectory or call 630-834-6700

GOSPEL

At a wedding party, Mary said to Jesus, they have no more wine. Help them. Even though it was not time for him to perform miracles, Jesus honored his Mother by changing the water into wine. When you obey God by honoring your mother's wishes, you turn ordinary things, like opening a door, emptying trash, or making the bed into a gift Of love. This love makes your mother and God smile.

PRAYER

Lord, help me turn chores for my family into gifts for you.

I am so grateful for the friend who persuaded me to attend a CRHP weekend. It has been a life changer for me! I feel so much closer to God and much more involved in my faith.

I am also very thankful for all the like minded woman I have met through CRHP.

Please consider joining us January 29-30, 2022 for our next retreat weekend.

S.S.

In 2015, I attended my first CRHP weekend. Since that time, I have connected with so many people, ministries and, really, the whole faith community here at Visitation!

I have made so many beautiful friendships all the while knowing that our Catholic faith is the foundation. It is so beautiful to share my faith and journey with these women in my own parish community. # blessed!

The History of the Papacy --- Article 16

By Matt Pozen – Director of Faith Formation

Last week we explored the final persecution of Christians in the Roman Empire, which began in 303 AD under the emperor Diocletian, and how Pope Marcellinus caved in and sacrificed to the Roman gods in order to save his neck. We also looked at the rise of Constantine as emperor in the west, who defeated his rival in Rome in 312 AD at the Battle of the Milvian Bridge. Though pagan at the time, he later claimed to have had a vision the night before the battle of a Christian symbol (the CHI RHO), so he interpreted his victory as a sign of being blessed by the Christian God. Thus, in 313 AD he issued the famous “Edict of Milan” which ended Roman persecution of Christians and decreed toleration of all religions. In addition, Constantine bestowed favor, resources, and property on the Church, hoping that Christianity would replace paganism as the dominant religion in the Empire and further unify his realms.

Pope Miltiades (311-314 AD) met with Emperor Constantine and established good relations. In fact, Constantine gifted him with the palace of his wife’s family in Rome, and this Lateran Palace would be the official residence of the popes until the 15th century, when they moved to the Vatican. Though Constantine may have hoped that the rapidly growing Christian religion would unify his empire, he was immediately faced with the fact that the Church itself was subject to various divisions. Seeing Pope Marcellinus cave in to the pressure of persecution in 304 AD, Church leaders of a more “rigorist” bent in north Africa began to view the Catholic Church as compromised and corrupt. They separated themselves from this Church, formed their own “pure” community, and held that the sacraments were only valid if they were performed by clergy untainted by serious sin. Since the local bishop in Carthage, a man named Caecilian, had been ordained by someone who had lapsed during the persecution, they rejected his ordination as invalid and elected their own bishop, a man named Donatus. These separatist Christians under Donatus came to be known as the Donatists, and they grew in numbers, especially in north Africa.

Emperor Constantine put Pope Miltiades in charge of dealing with the Donatists, not just for religious reasons but also for political ones, since they were causing divisions in north Africa, which was part of Constantine’s empire. The pope organized a synod in Rome which ruled that Caecilian was the legitimate bishop of Carthage, and Donatus was excommunicated. At a theological level the synod taught that the validity of the sacraments did not depend on the worthiness of either the minister or the recipient, but rather on the sheer grace of Christ working through his Church. Otherwise, how could one ever trust that they had received a valid sacrament, whether baptism or eucharist, since the state of the minister’s soul can never be known for sure. Constantine backed up this synod by ruling that only those bishops in communion with the bishop of Rome would be seen as legitimate and supported by imperial resources. For the Donatists, this only strengthened their position that the Catholic Church was compromised and in cahoots with the Empire, and their movement continued to grow. The Donatist movement would continue to split the Church in north Africa until the 7th century, at which point both Catholics and Donatists were conquered by the armies of Islam.

Pope Sylvester (314-335 AD) reaped the rewards of Constantine’s support, commissioning the building of several important churches in Rome. Next to the Lateran Palace where he resided, Sylvester built a large basilica known as St. John Lateran (which is the cathedral of the diocese of Rome). On Vatican Hill, over the shrine of Peter’s bones, the Basilica of St. Peter was built. (This basilica from the time of Constantine would last until the 16th century, at which point, under the direction of Michelangelo, it was torn down and replaced with the grand Renaissance basilica that we see today.)

In 322 AD Constantine defeated his co-emperor in the east and thus became sole leader of the whole Roman Empire. Since the city of Rome and its Senate were still predominantly pagan, he decided to build a new capital at the city of Byzantium in the east where Christians were in the majority. There he built a grand palace and funded the building of several churches. In 330 AD this new capital was renamed “Constantinople” and was officially consecrated by both Christian and pagan priests (since he didn’t yet want to disenfranchise the “old religion”). Constantine decreed that throughout his whole empire Sunday would be a day of rest. All Christian clergy would be exempt from paying taxes and would be supported by imperial resources. Thus, the bond between Church and Empire seemed to be sealed, to the benefit of both. But with the end of persecutions, which tended to unite Christians in a common quest for survival, various divisions over basic Christian beliefs rose to the surface in this new era of peace. Next week we’ll look at these theological divisions and the Council of Nicea which Constantine convoked in 325 AD.
