Welcome

For I know well the plans I have in mind for you—says the Lord—plans for your welfare and not for woe, so as to give you a future full of hope. Jer. 29.11

Greetings, my friends. I write to you with a still full heart (and stomach) from this past weekend. WOW. All hands were on deck and it felt like the entire township came out to Nativity. My first time, too! I had never been before. And with all the good will, the excitement and the dedication to the community, I was especially struck by just how fun it was. Lots and lots of fun, and joy. Joy is an end in itself, and Nativity made it happen.

As I've written before, I strive to be an amateur historian (or at least a wanna-be amateur), and the topics to learn, think through or write about are endless. With our students back in school, I am reminded of that great scholarly era of my student life, of course, the fourth grade. Mrs. Matthingly's class - which, interestingly enough, our homeroom was about twenty girls and four boys. That lack of buddies in the class is probably the main reason I remember fourth grade at all.

In 4th grade, it was common in my day to start learning civic history, especially INDIANA history. Local history - early governors, shifting capital cities, rivers, birds. And honestly, I'd love to revisit it! But something I try to be very aware of is an undercurrent of history that your average American student is not likely to learn. And that's our Catholic history. Whether local, global, or spanning from centuries, we have what the books say, but throughout society our Church is constantly at work. And I am a firm believer that it is so important for us to know our own history, to celebrate what the Church does behind the scenes (like a festival), particularly in a local way. The Catholic Church has her own way and her own history, and society would not be the same without it.

Some examples. If you've ever been downtown to Lockerbie Square, a cozy (and expensive) neighborhood right behind Mass Ave, you'll see the beautiful historic homes, the cobbled streets and even the Riley House. But you'll also find historical society plaques dedicated to the Little Sisters of the Poor. In 1873, the Sisters founded a home right in the heart of the relatively new city. The plaque says that they built a home for the aged poor in the city, and that they'd take anybody at all, so long as they were over the age of 60, of course. Right there, just one mile from the circle, the presence of those nuns showed the city the way of charity. In 1967, the Sisters moved to their current home on 86th street. But just imagine, for an entire century, those Sisters working in one of our cities' most famous neighborhoods. Some of those houses today go for seven figures. Interestingly enough, from some of my night-walks around the square, I believe one of the little side-streets is honest-to-goodness named, Bishop Chatard Street (after our first bishop in Indy).

Another example. My beloved Jasper, Indiana. We used to visit Jasper from the seminary, and also when I was the priest in French Lick, I would often make my way across SR 56. Jasper isn't exactly a big city, but compared to French Lick or Saint Meinrad, it may as well be Seattle. With the stunning and massive stone church of St. Joseph (and two other churches right there in town), the overwhelmingly Catholic population has some good reminders that, if not for the Church, the town would not exist. This is honestly true of much of Southern Indiana. German priests were arriving in droves in the early 1800s, and bringing with them Catholic families from the homeland. They essentially settled in the wilderness, and built churches. German priests in Jasper then recruited people to leave Germany. And without the Church, that German immigrant population would not have had a home to come to. Jasper, IN was founded by Catholic priests welcoming their community, a few families at a time. And today, it's a gem of our state.

I had one more example, a fun one too! But I seem to have run out of room. Til next time, my friends.

In Peace,
Fr. Ben

MONTH FIVE – Developing Baby Spiritual Adoption Program

Your spiritually adopted baby weighs over one pound now, and his mother can feel his movement. Before this time he was too small for her to feel. Although he swam with ease in his watery world, he needed to be big and strong enough to kick hard against the outside wall and dent it – the inside wall of the uterus has little feeling. We are mid-way through the pregnancy now. Your prayers have helped your baby's mother continue with her pregnancy and seek the help she needs.

(Information taken from Wilke, Dr. and Mrs. John C. Abortion: Questions and Answers. Cincinnati, Ohio: Hayes Publishing Company, Inc., 1985)

Jesus, Mary and Joseph, I love you very much. I beg you to spare the life of the unborn baby that I have spiritually adopted who is in danger of abortion. (Prayer of Venerable Fulton J. Sheen)
