From the Pastor's Desk

Praised be Jesus Christ! "Nascantur in admiration" – let them be born in wonder. This Latin aphorism has been around a long time, but I first stumbled upon it in the last book of the Odd Thomas series written by Dean Koontz. It captures the goal of education, namely the cultivation of the God-given wonder that is most evident in children. When we were young the world was new to us and learning about its beauty, truth, and goodness was an elixir that engaged our senses on many levels. For example, when my oldest nephew was little, he loved looking at the moon. And his enthusiasm was contagious, as he would point to it at night and exclaim, "Uncle Sam, it's the moon!" I will carry that memory for all of my days.

How to encourage the wonder and awe that we once expressed so naturally is an ongoing challenge for human beings. The modern attachment to screens and technology has clearly muted this and there's always going to be the temptation to settle for what is easy and comfortable and makes the least demands of us. But the aphorism of "you get what you pay for" applies here: contemporary music, while bringing a certain ephemeral pleasure, only does so for the duration of the song. Then it fades away. Contrast that with the seemingly timelessness of Beethoven, Bach, or Mozart and one begins to realize that not all music is the same. Many colleges teach a music appreciation course and that's because we need training and formation to appreciate what is truly beautiful and life-giving. Just one more proof that we were all damaged by original sin.

We host the Catechesis of the Good Shepherd (CGS) at Holy Name, and we are richly blessed by its understanding of how children learn. Sofia Cavalletti was trained as a Scripture scholar and was asked one time to teach some children their catechism. She had no previous experience doing so, but decided to share some of the well-known Bible stories with the children. After two hours, the session ended, but one little boy started to cry because he only wished that she would continue. That was an epiphany for Sofia, as she realized she had stumbled upon something that was holy and that was worthy of further reflection. By the designs of Divine Providence, Sofia met Gianna Gobbi, a woman who was thoroughly versed in the novel methods of Maria Montessori.

Although Cavalletti and Montessori never met (the latter died in 1952, shortly before the pivotal catechesis session Cavalletti had with the children), their work overlapped in an amazing way. With her new friend Gianna Gobbi, Cavalletti inherited the understanding of how children learn by doing, especially when they're young. This led to all sorts of amazing insights, not the least of which is the fact that children seem to have a hidden teacher when they're young. We call this teacher the Holy Spirit and He can do amazing things in children if we provide them the space and enough direction to allow the Holy Spirit room to move. And that led to the creation of what is called an atrium.

Holy Name has three levels of Catechesis of the Good Shepherd, and all of them have their own atrium. In the atrium there are many hands-on ways to learn about Jesus and His love for His people. When Jesus said, "Let the children come to me," He wasn't kidding (and even though we often think He's not talking to us, He went on later to say that "unless you become like children, you cannot enter the Kingdom of God." Saint John, as a very old man, once wrote, "We are God's children now" – we are called to become little again, which is both beautiful and very difficult as we get older). In the atrium, children have space and enough silence to allow the Holy Spirit to work in unique and somewhat mysterious ways. The children come to know Jesus as a Good Shepherd who loves them personally and who will always watch out for them and come to their aid in times of distress. And while studies show that children who learned their faith through CGS fall away from their faith at the usual rate as they get older, it's also clear that they come back much more readily and disposed to re-enter the waters of peace that they once knew as children.

This is a commentary on the way God made us. He knew that original sin damaged us in pretty awful ways. We tend to run from God when we fail, and we imagine that He is disappointed with us because of our sins. Shame and guilt and chronic discouragement hinder us, and we stay away from God because we fail to believe in His love. These are common occurrences, and probably most of us reading this could describe our own spiritual journeys in similar terms. But God is a Father, and a perfectly loving one at that. The path to Heaven is one of remembering our earlier days and how there was once true awe and wonder in our hearts and minds as we first encountered this world that God made for us. The Catechesis of the Good Shepherd sows these seeds very deeply and we're so blessed to have it right here in our own parish.

This summer, training will be offered for any of you who would like to participate in this remarkable enterprise. My dear Mom has expressed interest, and who knows, maybe she'll come and stay with me in July as she learns what Sofia and Gianna discovered in their atrium all those years ago. If you or someone you know is interested, please let me know. Our program has grown by leaps and bounds and we are in need of both some new catechists, not to mention some volunteers who would simply assist in the atrium a couple of hours a week. This is an ideal opportunity for retired folks because CGS is in session during the day, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. We have every reason to believe God is doing something special here and having so many children in our school on a regular basis is one of the best things happening at Holy Name right now.

In closing, I want to wish you a very happy Memorial Day weekend, the veritable gateway to summer! As we thank God for the veterans whose courageous service both made and kept our country free, we continue to pray for peace in Ukraine. Archbishop Fulton Sheen mentioned once that in the thousands of years of recorded history, only about 200 of those years were characterized by a world completely at peace. There's never a shortage of reasons to pray and offer penance.

May God bless our veterans – those who are still with us, and those who now rest along the shores of a Kingdom that offers peace, the peace that they fought for so valiantly in our world!

Your friend in Christ,
Father Martin

May 29, 2022 - 7th Sunday of Easter

Unity and diversity can exist together. Our western minds have a grave difficulty seeing unity without conformity. We tend to believe that unless everyone believes the same thing, assents to the same body of truths, styles, and opinions, unity is not possible. Jesus, in today's Gospel, expresses a tenderness and an intimacy that the disciples actually can witness. This same tenderness and love are also reflected in his desire for unity and oneness. Jesus passionately wants all to be one. It is very clear that the success of Jesus' mission and the advance of the Gospel rises or falls with whether this unity is achieved. And it is a unity that is achieved around a person and not particulars.

Our church is extremely divided. These divisions all center on various theologies, philosophies, structures, and styles. We allow these particular concerns and interpretations, valid as many can be, to drive wedges between us and put us at odds with each other. They enrage us and cause us to lash out at other members of the Body of Christ. Differences are bound to exist in any group. We are unique and diverse people. Staunchly clinging to particular agendas and ideologies while waving the "we're right, you're wrong" banner as we forge ahead in battle does little to advance the real mission of Christ. We are perceived as weak, fractioned, self-focused and serving, and lacking empathy and love. How can the work of salvation be accomplished like this? We sacrifice our credibility. For what?

"I am the Alpha and the Omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the end." These words describe exactly who the glorified Christ really is. Jesus wants us to see this glory! Believe this! This is the unifying principle that draws the Body of Christ together as one, not our particular preferences of worship! We give too much power to our preferences, and all too easily forget that the real mission of Christ is much more than that! If we can work at truly loving each other as members of Christ's Body despite the differences that can so quickly divide us, then maybe we'll a bit more convincing to those who do not believe. The Risen Christ comes to us through the Eucharist. It doesn't matter where or how. Gather wherever you can and receive. We cannot substitute Jesus' passion with our own. We are one.

Come Celebrate!
