From the Pastor's Desk

Praised be Jesus Christ! "Extra, extra, read all about it!" It's not likely that any of us remember hearing these words because that era ended in the early 1930's. Just the same, the words are still evocative because they bring to mind images of children hawking newspapers with the latest breaking stories. There's something quaint about receiving the news from children. Heck, you even had a choice of which kid to patronize and whether you wanted to read the news at all. Contrast that with any airport where you're constantly bombarded with 24/7 cable news and one can understand why we sometimes hearken back to more innocent and halcyon days.

In a world that is quick to jump to conclusions, it's a challenge to take a "wait and see" attitude when it comes to news reporting. And in a world where the person who reports things first is rewarded, one can imagine how easily accuracy takes a back seat to immediacy. My Dad told us to take things with a grain of salt . . . Saint Paul said a similar thing when he said to test all things and retain that which is true (cf. 1 Thessalonians 5:21). It was once held that a person should be considered innocent until proven guilty. Sadly, many of these ideals have been sacrificed because reporting the news is an incredible generator of income. And money, in case we have forgotten, changes people.

All of this is a preface to the topic of how to stay informed without becoming brainwashed. Jesus said we would know the truth and that it would set us free. But He does not seem to have been all that concerned about the latest intrigues regarding power and prestige in the world that He called home. Around influential people like King Herod and Pontius Pilate, Jesus was decidedly cool and seemed almost disinterested. Pilate reminded Jesus that he could decide His fate, but this didn't impress Jesus one bit. So many times Jesus showed us by His example that while we are in the world, we are not of the world. When Jesus was asked about His kingdom, He didn't deny He was a king. He simply said that His kingdom is not here. Such a fact is crucial to our own relationship to this world. If this is not our home, then we can live with greater emotional distance and freedom.

Before someone takes this out of context, we are in no way exonerated of the responsibility to be good stewards. God told us early on that we were to exercise dominion over the Earth and that we are our brothers' keeper. But if we're just passing through and this is not our final home, we don't have to get so tied into knots when things aren't going the way we think they should. Jesus makes it clear that we should do our best to leave the world a better place than we found it. But He is also a realist: He tells us that in the world we will have trouble (John 16:33) and that the end of the world will be signaled by escalating violence, division, and bloodshed (check out the book of Revelation). People committed to having their Heaven on Earth defy these truths and typically make hell for everyone else. Let's consider some examples that come from our friends who deliver the news.

Secularism is the thesis that God has nothing to do with life on our planet. The convenience of secularism is that it can make up a moral code according to its own whim and anyone who might criticize it must be destroyed. For example, if a local celebrity declares that he's "marrying" a man, anyone who suggests that marriage can only take place between a man, a woman, and God is attacked vehemently and relegated to the bigot bin. Secularists are famous advocates of tolerance, but their version becomes viciously intolerant if you disagree with them. Sadly, many of the folks reporting the news in our country and abroad are steeped in secularism. Their goal is not really to report what happened: they're determined to tell you how you should feel about the enemies of their agendas and how to punish them. This means people who defend the sanctity of human life are to be attacked with the kind of vile that was once reserved for true criminals. And if you dare suggest that God made us male and female, then you must be humiliated so thoroughly that you'd never dare show your true colors again.

Watching the news used to be a fairly innocuous thing. However, the world rises and falls from time to time and we're living through some disturbing trends. Not that I've found the correct approach, but I refuse to watch the news on television. Because I've watched very little television in my adult life (I like movies, but they have to be redemptive and relatively clean), I'm a bit more aware of the fact that the media manipulates our emotions. Television and social media often intentionally create feelings that lead to certain conclusions. This is a sophisticated art that lives by rhetoric, inflection, and many half-truths. Frankly, if it's something we hear on the news, we do well to take it with a grain of salt.

I hope this doesn't come across as too pessimistic. We are curious creatures and we want to know what's happening in our world. Nuns who live in cloistered monasteries are curious too, but they're much more discerning about how they come by the news. They need to be informed because they're intercessors who are praying at all times for the world and its needs. But they've discovered that the truth about many situations is usually very slow to emerge. They have a fantastic filter that protects them from judging situations that aren't as clear as we might presume because of our instantaneous news reporting. Let me end with one example.

When Bishop Listecki was installed at the Cathedral in La Crosse in 2005, one of his guests was Mark Chmura. Later in the week we had a question and answer session with Bishop Listecki and I asked him why a Chicago Bears fan would have an infamous Green Bay Packer player at his installation. His response floored me: as a lawyer himself, Listecki's good friend had served as Chmura's attorney after Chmura was charged with sexual assault of a minor at a post-Prom party that he hosted. Long story short, the attorney cross examined the girls who made the allegations and they were lying. I never heard that story before and when I went back to see why it hadn't made the news, I discovered that it had. But because it wasn't a story that would sell or advance some predetermined agenda, it appeared in the very back of the few newspapers that carried it. Not surprisingly, when Chmura was accused, he was on the front page of every news source in Wisconsin (none of this excuses Chmura from the grave imprudence he demonstrated multiple times during that fateful night) .

Please be discerning about the news and what it means. An insightful approach was suggested years ago by Father Benedict Groeschel: you should spend more time reading the Bible than reading things that could be dangerous to your faith (the example at the time was Dan Brown's The DaVinci Code). Good advice, don't you think?

May God's wisdom be reflected in how we love the world with the courage and compassion of Jesus!

Your friend in Christ,
Father Martin

September 4, 2022 - 23rd Sunday in Ordinary Time

What virtue is the cornerstone of discipleship? Love. Jesus preached about it, lived it, and summarized his greatest commandment featuring it. Love is in our DNA. To follow Jesus, then, is to follow the path of love. While this may appear to be an attractive and easy option, it most assuredly is not. Authentic love always comes with sacrifice. It is the complete giving of oneself to another. The sacrificial character of love always requires that we leave something aside and pursue something else. This is at the heart of self-denial. Love asks us to make choices that are often difficult.

There is a reason Jesus asks that the love of God come first. “Charity is the right attitude of mind which prefers nothing to the knowledge of God. If a man possesses any strong attachment to the things of this earth, he cannot possess true charity (St. Maximus the Confessor).” “If anyone comes to me without hating his father and mother, wife and children, brothers and sisters, and even his own life, he cannot be my disciple.” A devoted disciple must be single-minded in her quest for God. She cannot allow anyone or anything to have more power over her soul than God. When any earthly attachments become more important than Love, we can get ourselves into trouble.

The Gospel calls us to walk boldly into the darkness, confusion, and emptiness of the world clothed in the mantle of love. We are asked to walk with others on their journey, offering a supportive, healing, challenging, and faithful presence. Ours is not to judge. To walk this sacrificial journey means that I must put myself aside and focus on the needs of others. “A sacrifice to be real must cost, must hurt and must empty ourselves (St. Teresa of Calcutta).” Love helps us walk straight and focus to see things more clearly and help others to do so as well. Many folks struggle to find joy and meaning in life. People may simply need someone with the freedom to sit with them in their pain, so they don’t feel so alone. Through acts of kindness, gestures of acceptance, and words of compassion, burdens can be lightened. Believe in God’s love and seek it above all other things!

Getting to know Jesus Christ in a deeper way:

Reading the Catechism in 10 months We grow in our love for someone as we get to know them better. Would you like to grow in your love for Jesus Christ through coming to know Him better? Reading the Catechism, a few pages each day, will help you to deepen your understanding of His incredible love for you. A modest schedule of 15 paragraphs per night (roughly 3 pages) has been arranged that will take about 10-15 minutes of reflective reading, 5 nights a week over 38 weeks. A schedule is emailed to participants every two weeks. To sign up, email Ann Lankford at alankford@diolc.org with the word Catechism in the subject line. There are usually over 100 people who participate each year and they express that the fruits are well worth the effort. Invite your friends to join.
