A note from Fr. Ryan.....

After telling us about his Ascension, the Creed says that Jesus “sits at the right hand of the Father.” This image, taken from the Scriptures, tells us that Jesus has all the power and authority that the Father has. The Father, being a pure spirit, doesn’t have right or left hands; it is a metaphor, or a story meant to describe the reality that Jesus and the Father are equals.

In ancient Israel, the king would sit upon his throne as a sign that he was lord and ruler of that nation. The act of “sitting down” on the throne was a symbol of his authority. Even today, judges and politicians always sit down when they exercise their authority. The President could easily sign a bill while standing or walking around, but he sits down to emphasize his authority to take that action.

We say that Jesus sits at the right hand of the Father to make two beliefs abundantly clear. First, we believe that Jesus and the Father have the same authority, power, and are worthy of the same worship. Second, we believe that they are not the exact same thing – Jesus is not the Father, and the Father is not Jesus! We’ll dive a little deeper into this when we speak of the Holy Spirit in a later article.

Fr. Ryan
