Hope Lutheran Church: a Community of Faith in the Heart of Fond du Lac

Feeling a little burned out on bad news?

You're not alone.

The year 2020 seemed to be a month-to-month challenge to top bad news with worse news, dominated by the coronavirus pandemic. Add to that a contentious election cycle, protests and unrest over social issues, and a host of other potential crises — like an invasion of murder hornets and the government's revelation of UFO photos — and it's no wonder we're all feeling a kind of information hangover. Many of us were staying home due to quarantine and social distancing, which naturally led to us watching more news than normal.

Many of us are old enough to remember when news outlets consisted of three TV channels, a daily newspaper, and the radio. When Walter Cronkite told us, "That's the way it is" at the end of every evening news broadcast, we had some time to digest what was going on. The 24-hour, multi-platform, social media-curated, constant cycle of news that confronts us today, however, allows us no time to process and seems to pile on with information that's not only continuous, but controversial. It tends to include a lot of conflicting information that leaves us confused and stressed, often with no tangible way to respond other than to offer an opinion. Neil Postman, in his 1985 book Amusing Ourselves to Death: Public Discourse in the Age of Show Business, called this the "loop of impotence," or the fact that, "The news elicits from you a variety of opinions about which you can do nothing except to offer them as more news, about which you can do nothing."

Postman, writing in the days before the internet, was already pointing to the problem of "news fatigue" or a general malaise that leaves us feeling depressed, powerless, and distrustful of news sources that often seem superficial, sensationalist, inaccurate, or hopelessly biased. The result is that the more news we consume the more anxiety we feel or, on the flip side, the more desensitized we become to the news itself.

One solution to that anxiety is to simply turn off the news, but that becomes increasingly difficult in a world where we are bombarded with news every time we go into public spaces ... in person or online. Another solution might be to only focus on the good news, as people like actor John Krasinski tried to help us do during the pandemic through his "Some Good News" videos. But neither ignorance nor selectivity would seem to be the answer in a world anxious for the kind of news that people can actually act upon.

What we need instead is a mindset that puts the current news within the context of an eternal perspective. The bad and good stuff happening now has happened before and will happen again. Rather than fret or form yet another opinion about it all, the prophet Isaiah calls us to remember that the only news that really matters is that the God who created the world in which all this news happens is still at work and will ultimately set everything right.

Isaiah wrote to a people confronted with the reality of exile — people isolated and distanced far from home in circumstances they did not choose, but that were the result of their sinful choices. In Isaiah 40:1-11, God announces through the prophet that a return from exile is on the horizon: a new exodus in which God's people would be set free and restored. God himself would dwell with them and he would feed them and protect them as a shepherd feeds and protects his flock.

This is the news that God's people needed to hear, and it's the news that puts all other news into perspective. While we worry over news about the forces of nature threatening to overwhelm us, God reminds us that he is the Creator who “has measured the waters in the hollow of his hand” (v. 12). While the daily news focuses on the intrigue between nations, God reminds his people that, to him, “the nations are like a drop from a bucket and are accounted as dust on the scales” (v. 15). They are “as nothing before him; they are accounted as less than nothing and emptiness” (v. 17).

While the news needs us to be constantly concerned about our material safety and wealth, God reminds his people to be careful what they worship and to be mindful of the things over which they fret. These things become “idols” for human beings, but they cannot be compared to the surpassing glory of the God who created all things (vv. 18-20).

The glory and character of God provides us with the best news we could possibly hear. “Have you not known? Have you not heard? Has it not been told you from the beginning? Have you not understood from the foundations of the earth?” Ask the Creator God, the one who “sits above the circle of the earth” and rules over it (vv. 21-22). The natural and human-caused calamities that dominate the news cycle are not news to God. God puts them all into perspective by taking the long view. Those rulers and newsmakers who crowd our screens today are “as nothing” to God, who sees them like withered plants that are here today and gone tomorrow (vv. 23-24). No one who makes the news will ever be God’s equal; he is the one who creates them all (vv. 25-26).

These are powerful reminders for the people of God who, like Israel, often got caught up in the news of the day and began to despair or, worse, began to be sucked into the world’s idolatry, fear and intrigue. The resultant news fatigue made them believe their plight was “hidden from the Lord” and that they had been “disregarded” by God (v. 27). But that’s when God comes shouting through once again with the news that should dominate the attention of all God’s people regardless of their circumstances.

“Have you not known? Have you not heard? The Lord is the everlasting God, the Creator of the ends of the earth” (v. 28). Notice the repeat of verse 12, which is a way of bringing home the point that the God who created the “ends of the earth” allows nothing to escape his notice and will allow nothing to defeat his purposes for his good creation. No matter how bad the news seems to be, God’s purposes will win out.

That’s the reason God himself does not suffer from “news fatigue.” As Isaiah puts it, “He does not faint or grow weary; his understanding is unsearchable. He gives power to the faint and strengthens the powerless” (vv. 28-29). Not only does God know the long view of his purposes in history, he offers power and strength to those who feel the fatigue of bad news in the present. Human beings tend to busy themselves trying to either come up with solutions to every problem or offering their opinions to those who “should” be doing something to fix them. But as the pandemic has taught us, there are limits to human knowledge and ability. If we trust only in ourselves, we are bound to experience the fatigue of despair when we fail or reach the end of our ability. The energy and idealism of youth can lead to disappointment and exhaustion when the reality sets in that we cannot “fix” the news no matter how hard we try (v. 30).

Rather than fret, fixate, or forego the news, Isaiah invites us to deal with our fatigue in light of the larger reality the Creator God has once again declared to his people. Instead of “waiting” on the news by constantly refreshing our screens or scrolling through a social media feed, Isaiah instead invites us to “wait for the Lord” (v. 31). That “waiting” doesn’t mean we simply sit around and do nothing, allowing the news to continue to wash over us. To “wait” means to look to God to provide us with perspective, hope, and purpose through prayer and through being immersed in God’s Word.

How much might our “news fatigue” be mitigated, for example, if we committed to spending at least as much time in prayer as we do scrolling through the news and social media? Many of our phones and devices now tell us precisely how much time we spend online every day. Spending an equivalent amount of time (or more) listening to God and bringing our fatigue and worries to him would allow us the opportunity to put those things in perspective while renewing our strength to deal with the things we can actually do something about. The rest? Well, we simply put the rest in God’s hands, knowing that his purposes win out in the end.

Faith Mentors

As I sit and think about what I may want to share with you this month, I feel it would be very important to share something new that we are doing with our 8th Grade Catechism Class.

They are the future of our church you know!

Early last fall we came up with an idea that we should have our 8th grade Catechisms students pair up with members of the church to compliment our Prayer Partners. We discussed this idea, and the more we thought about it, we decided to give it a try. We had the students, but now we needed to find mentors. As always at Hope, we had members volunteer and step up to be Faith Mentors for our students.

Now I am sure you are wondering what this entails. It is quite simple. Catechism students pair with adult mentors who discuss faith and life issues. The students and mentors meet once each quarter in lieu of Catechism class. Faith Mentors do not take the place of parents, pastors, teachers or peers, but provide one additional connecting point to the community of faith.

Our Faith Mentors are ordinary everyday people who play important roles in the growth of a young person's faith. Faith Mentors are very special people. They offer the students trust and respect. In talking with the mentors, they are very honored to participate in another person's faith journey. On the other side, the students are enjoying their Sunday mornings with their Faith Mentors as well. This has been a great addition to our 8th Grade Catechism class curriculum.

As I stated earlier, these students are the future of our church and this program gives them the opportunity to connect with other members of our church and gives them the true feeling of belonging. A special thanks to all the Faith Mentors for the time and guidance that you give to these students.

Then he said to them all: "Whoever wants to be my disciple must deny themselves and take up their cross daily and follow me." Luke 9:23

Deacon, Bob Mengert

Countering the news with a daily discipline of time spent in the presence of God will enable us to pick up a different pace of life. Do you grab your phone to check the news first thing in the morning? That's a recipe for starting the day with anxiety, rather than mounting up for the day "with wings like eagles" (v. 31). Instead, try beginning the day with Scripture and prayer before you even touch that phone or the TV remote. Allow God's Word to nourish you and strengthen you for the day ahead, to prepare you to run the gauntlet of the day without growing weary or discouraged, and to walk steadily forward without fainting under a load of bad news.

The cure for news fatigue, in other words, is to begin with the good news first!

PRESCHOOL and 4K

Ministry and Education

Hope Lutheran Preschool and 4K are blessed to have a church and congregation praying for them!

On February 15 the 4-year-old Kindergarten resumed classes five days a week. This is great for the students who can now learn in person, which research has shown to be a better learning environment.

Every day students work on their fine motor skills which will help with life skills such as handwriting, buttoning, zipping, tying shoelaces and self-care. At this age children start by holding with their fist as shown. Preschool teacher, Mrs. Neff, is one of the teachers who works with students encouraging a proper hold.

February gave the children plenty of snow for play which invigorates the desire to learn and express.

Upcoming highlights for March:

Dr. Seuss & Hope Preschool

Hope students will celebrate the 116th birthday of Dr. Seuss. A day will be set aside to wear clothing that does not match, is backward or looks crazy. Theodor Seuss Geisel is known around the country for his children's books that have inspired children around the world to love books and learning. Do you remember Green Eggs and Ham, The Cat in the Hat or The Lorax? Let us know which Dr. Seuss book is your favorite. Preschool Director Beth's favorite is Oh, the Places You'll Go!

Fun fact: Dr. Seuss invented the word "nerd".
