2021 Reading Pt. 3

My favorite novel from last year was The Remains Of The Day, the highly acclaimed 1988 book by Kazuo Ishiguro which was made into a film in 1993 with Anthony Hopkins and Emma Thompson. I saw the movie years ago but did not remember the story. The basic plot could seem to be a rather bland and tedious story- life of an English butler. And in fact for some readers it might not feel like much more. However, Ishiguro reveals the story subtly and so very gradually to open up the very private confines of a man questioning his whole life. Stevens the butler, with a high sense of duty and loyalty, worked in the service of a respectable English lord through and after World War II.

With the years behind him and while seeking to reestablish a relationship with another former employee of the house, Miss Kenton, a relationship which might have allowed him to feel and be more truly human, Stevens reminisces and realizes the very uncomfortable truth about the man and the house he confidently dedicated most of his life. The author Ishiguro was born in Japan in 1954 but his family moved to Britain in 1960 giving some insight into his crafting this psychological portrait.

Another favorite novel was The Tiger's Wife (2011) by Téa Obreht, who similarly has the story of a moving as a child. Born in Belgrade in former Yugoslavia in 1985, she moved to the United States at age 12. Her much praised and popular debut novel is the story of Natalia, a young doctor in an unspecified Balkan country who is seeking answers to family mysteries rooted in her close relationship with her grandfather and times with him and The Jungle Book. Obreht's style has some aspects of magical realism, which is most often associated with Latin American writers such as Gabriel Garcia Marquez. Being new to that type of writing, I am still trying to understand its literary use and intentions. Dreams, memories, and unexpected visions seem to characterize magical realism. I would like to re-read both Ishiguro's and Obreht's books once again if it were not for others waiting.

Another tiger book, not a novel, was Thomas Howard's Christ The Tiger (1967). He wrote: "Christian vision...grasps the actualities of history and existence and transfigures them by seeing beyond the dark borders of finitude and discrepancy, evil and futility, doom and decay to an order that gives depth, substance, and significance to our existence."

LIVE THE LITURGY Inspiration for the Week

Good dietitians will remind us that we are not only the product of what we eat but the disciplines we undertake. Many people spend a great deal of time and effort eating a healthy diet, getting a sufficient amount of rest, and engaging in regular exercise. Experts tell us that attending to these increases our chances for a longer life. While this is certainly a worthy pursuit, is our earthly life really the one that requires the most attention and effort? Faith kicks in to remind us that we are meant to live forever with God. Hence, isn't it our eternal destiny that requires most of our effort and attention? The food and nourishment we need to achieve this goal and fine tune our souls for this promised inheritance are the Body and Blood of Christ. Only this heavenly sustenance will unite us with God and our brothers and sisters, strengthen us to do what the Gospel asks us to do and prepare us for life eternal. Through the discipline of prayer, our desire to receive our Lord is deepened. It is this yearning, above anything else, that we want clearly seen and front and center when we close our eyes in death. God loves us so much that he gave us his only begotten Son. Let us rush to receive him!
