Justice Corner

Justice for Children

Today’s scriptures invite us to think about many struggles for justice in the world. In the gospel, Jesus places special emphasis on a child. There are many injustices that affect the children of our world, especially those related to poverty, war, and violence. In America, one in three children will live in poverty at some point in their childhood. Most of the world’s poor are children. It has been estimated that over 300,00 children are being used in more than 30 conflicts worldwide. Many become victims of human trafficking and other crimes.

We know that people who speak up for justice and peace may encounter opposition and persecution. The first reading from Wisdom reminds us of this as does today’s prophecy from Jesus. In fact, it will be surprising if we do not face challenges and opposition as we try to live out our Christian values.

To learn how you can act to protect children visit the websites below.

Please remember in prayer David Mortl, of St. Luke, who has died, his daughter, Kathy (Greg) Warchol, grandchildren, Megan & Danny Warchol, of St. Luke and their family.

Eternal rest grant unto her, O Lord.
R./And let perpetual light shine upon her.
May her soul and the souls of all the faithful departed, through the mercy of God, rest in peace.
R./ Amen.

Luke’s Literary Ladies

Luke’s Literary Ladies will meet on Tuesday September 21st at 7:00 pm in the Narthex Meeting room. We will meet with masks on and sit socially distant. The book selected is: A Gentleman in Moscow by Amor Towles.

Please join us if you feel healthy and safe

In today’s Gospel Jesus called the Twelve, and said to them, “If anyone wishes to be first, they shall be the last of all and the servant of all.” Taking a child, he placed the child in their midst, and putting His arms around the child, he said to them, “Whoever receives one child such as this in my name, receives me; and whoever receives me, receives not me but the One who sent me.”

Your gift in the St. Luke St. Vincent de Paul Poor Box will help hungry children feel the arms of Jesus around them.

Dear People of St. Luke and Guests – Catechists, ALL!

At all Masses for this 25th Sunday of Ordered Time we celebrate Catechetical Sunday. As Baptized Catholic Christians; members of the Body of Christ we all serve in the Ministry of Catechist; forming one another and our world by the living Gospel of our daily lives. Out of so many parishioners who catechize we single out those who minister in our Christian Faith Formation program and the RCIA (Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults) and voice a special blessing over them. We are certainly grateful for all who participate in Christian Formation, especially parents who are the first formers of their children in Faith. In a special way, we thank Cathy Smith, Director of Faith Formation; Shawn Rochon, Director of Music and Liturgy; and Jane Dunne, Administrative Assistant/Bulletin Editor for their Faith Formation leadership.

From the Pastor

Much of what Pope Francis said to the people of Slovakia on a recent trip can apply to all of us when it comes to our life-long Faith formation and ongoing conversion. The title of the article caught my eye and Francis' message made sense.

Pope Francis: We need 'creativity of the Gospel,' not 'a defensive Catholicism'

By CNA (Catholic News Agency) Staff; Bratislava, Slovakia, Sep 13, 2021

Pope Francis told Slovakia's Catholics on Monday that the Church should respond to secularization with the "creativity of the Gospel," not "a defensive Catholicism." Speaking to clergy and lay people in St. Martin's Cathedral in the capital, Bratislava, on Sept. 13, the pope encouraged Catholics to draw inspiration from Sts. Cyril and Methodius, who translated the Bible into the Slavonic language.

"Isn't this what Slovakia also needs today? I wonder. Isn't this perhaps the most urgent task facing the Church before the peoples of Europe: finding new 'alphabets' to proclaim the faith?" he asked. "We are heirs to a rich Christian tradition, yet for many people today, that tradition is a relic from the past; it no longer speaks to them or affects the way they live their lives."

"Faced with the loss of the sense of God and of the joy of faith, it is useless to complain, to hide behind a defensive Catholicism, to judge and blame the bad world. No, we need the creativity of the Gospel." The 84-year-old pope, who is making his first international trip since undergoing surgery in July, looked at ease as he delivered his live-streamed address in the capital's largest church, located beneath the imposing Bratislava Castle. Slovakian bishops, priests, religious, seminarians, and catechists listened on headsets to a live translation of the speech, which the pope delivered in Italian, frequently stopping for off-the-cuff remarks on everything from the Russian writer Fyodor Dostoevsky to the importance of short homilies.

Francis said: "This is the first thing we need: a Church that can walk together, that can tread the paths of life holding high the living flame of the Gospel." "The Church is not a fortress, a stronghold, a lofty castle, self-sufficient and looking out upon the world below." "Here in Bratislava, you have a castle and it is a fine one. The Church, though, is a community that seeks to draw people to Christ with the joy of the Gospel -- not the castle. She is the leaven of God's Kingdom of love and peace in our world."

Pope Francis said that the Church must strive to be humble, like Jesus. "How great is the beauty of a humble Church, a Church that does not stand aloof from the world, viewing life with a detached gaze, but lives her life within the world," he said. "Living within the world, let us not forget: sharing, walking together, welcoming people's questions and expectations. This will help us to escape from our self-absorption, for the center of the Church ... is not the Church." He continued: "We need to become immersed in the real lives of people and ask ourselves: what are their spiritual needs and expectations? It seems important to me to try to respond to these questions."

He offered three words to help guide Catholics: freedom, creativity, and dialogue. He noted that many people were afraid of freedom, saying: "We would rather get along by doing what others -- perhaps the masses, or public opinion, or the things that the media sell us -- decide for us. This should not be. Today so many times we do the things that the media decide for us."

He recalled the biblical episode in which the Israelites asked if they were better off living in servitude in Egypt, with a guarantee of onions, than wandering exhausted in the desert. He also referred to the story of the Grand Inquisitor in Dostoevsky's masterpiece "The Brothers Karamazov," who rebuked Jesus for giving humans freedom, insisting that what they needed was bread. He said: "Sometimes in the Church too this idea can take hold. Better to have everything readily defined, laws to be obeyed, security and uniformity, rather than to be responsible Christians and adults who think, consult their conscience and allow themselves to be challenged. That's the beginning of casuistry, all regulated..."

"In the spiritual and ecclesial life, we can be tempted to seek an ersatz peace that consoles us, rather than the fire of the Gospel that disturbs and transforms us. The safe onions of Egypt prove more comfortable than the uncertainties of the desert."

"Yet a Church that has no room for the adventure of freedom, even in the spiritual life, risks becoming rigid and self-enclosed. Some people may be used to this. But many others -- especially the younger generations -- are not attracted by a faith that leaves them no interior freedom, by a Church in which all are supposed to think alike and blindly obey." He continued: "Dear friends, do not be afraid to train people for a mature and free relationship with God. This relationship is important."

“Perhaps this will give us the impression that we are diminishing our control, power, and authority, yet the Church of Christ does not seek to dominate consciences and occupy spaces, but rather to be a ‘wellspring’ of hope in people’s lives.” The pope urged bishops and priests to be attentive to their flock’s need for freedom as the country undergoes rapid changes. “For this reason, I encourage you to help set them free from a rigid religiosity,” he said. “Get out of this, and let them grow free.”

“No one should feel overwhelmed. Everyone should discover the freedom of the Gospel by gradually entering into a relationship with God, confident that they can bring their history and personal hurts into his presence without fear or pretense, without feeling the need to protect their own image.” “To be able to say: ‘I am a sinner,’ but to say it sincerely, not beat our chests and then continue to believe we are righteous. Freedom.” May the proclamation of the Gospel be liberating, never oppressive. May the Church be a sign of freedom and welcome.”

Pope Francis recalled receiving a letter from a bishop complaining about the pope’s representative in his country. The letter said: “We were 400 years under the Turks and we suffered. Then 50 under communism and we suffered. But the seven years with this nuncio were worse than the other two.”

The pope commented: “Sometimes I wonder: how many people can say the same about the bishop they have or the parish priest? How many people? No, without freedom, without fatherhood, things don’t work out.”

After reflecting on the need for creativity, Pope Francis appealed to clergy to limit homilies to around 10 minutes -- a point he has made frequently since his election in 2013. (COVID-19 has forced this issue.) The spontaneous appeal prompted the audience to applaud. When the noise died down, the pope observed that the clapping had begun among a group of Sisters, who, he joked, “are victims of our homilies.”

Emphasizing the need for dialogue, the pope referred to an episode in the life of the Slovakian Cardinal Ján Chryzostom Korec, who died in 2015. When he mentioned the cardinal’s name, he drew another strong round of applause. The pope said: “He was a Jesuit cardinal, persecuted by the [communist] regime, imprisoned, and sentenced to forced labor until he fell ill. When he came to Rome for the Jubilee of the Year 2000, he went to the catacombs and lit a candle for his persecutors, imploring mercy for them.”

“This is the Gospel. This is the Gospel. It grows in life and in history through humble and patient love.”

May our catechesis ‘be creative not defensive.’ THANKS AGAIN TO OUR CHRISTIAN FORMATION CATECHISTS, AND ALL WHO SHARE FAITH THROUGH HEALTHY, HAPPY, HOLY LIVING. Peace, Ken

From Cathy's Desk

"Say the Word and My Soul Shall Be Healed."

Today is Catechetical Sunday. Some may say, "So what?" This is a very important day celebrated each year. It is a day when we celebrate, commission and bless those who minister in the church by sharing their faith with others. This takes many forms. For example, we have those who lead by sharing time in Scripture Study, preparing adults to be welcomed into the Church with RCIA, those who share the gifts of music, and there are those who share their faith by Catechizing the children and youth of the Church through Christian Faith Formation sessions. However, even if you are not part of any of the above named groups, you are still a catechist. People see how you live your life. In this way, you are teaching or catechizing by example. I invite you to thank those who are recognized as Catechists this Sunday, but I also invite you to look in the mirror and identify the gifts you share with the community of St. Luke Parish.

Adult Question: What evidence do you see in the world around you that many do not accept Jesus' teaching on power and ambition?

Child Question: Why do you think Jesus says if you want to be first you should take care of others?

Director of Faith Formation/Pastoral Associate

Children's Liturgy of the Word

At the 10:30am Mass each Sunday, the children of the parish are offered an opportunity to hear the Gospel and one additional reading as well as participate in the Psalm in language which is easier to understand. Currently, we are in need of high school students and/or adults to share in this ministry. Ideally, we are seeking 4-6 people and people willing to act as substitutes. Please contact Cathy Smith csmith@stlukebrookfield.org or (262) 782-0032 ext 106.

Will you please give me a name?!?!?

As a member of the F. R. O. G. Squad, I need a name! So far only 4 people have offered any suggestions. I would really like to have a few more ideas to choose from. Near the board with my picture in the Narthex are slips of paper and a container for you to share your name idea for me. Please put your first and last name on the other side so we know who came up with the great idea. Remember membership into the F. R. O. G Squad is easy! Just start praying and relying on God right now!

Jars Needed

I am still in need of 32 oz. Plastic Jars from Miracle Whip or Mayonnaise for the Christian Faith Formation program. Please bring cleaned Plastic Jars as soon as possible. If you have questions, please contact Cathy Smith csmith@stlukebrookfield.org (262) 782-0032 ext. 106

Augustine, Tom Brochhausen, Chris Coyle, Missy Creevy, Vance Dahl, Bill Freisleben,

Jon Gnorski, Kay Kim, Shilpa Kuriakose, John LaRose, Robin LaRose, Sue Neville, Nancy Rogers, Dan Warchol, and Megan Warchol. I also want to thank the families who helped to bring Birthday Party supplies as a form of service to benefit the MacCanon Brown Homeless Sanctuary.

The success of liturgical restoration is closely interwoven with social and political action. We can't reasonably pray for peace unless we are working for peace. We can't eat the food of salvation in good conscience so long as anyone goes unfed or unhoused. For the length of time that anyone can't eat and sleep where others can eat and sleep, our celebrations of the mystery of Christ will ring hollow.

They will be signs of community to which there corresponds no genuine reality of community.
