Reflection from Fr. Ron

The God of Israel, the God proclaimed by Jesus the Christ, the God we encounter in Christ and the Spirit in the Gospels, is a God of mercy and compassion. As we enter the season of Lent this month, it is good and appropriate to remember this: we face the reality of sin at work in the world, in the Church and in our hearts in the presence of the God of mercy and compassion who desires that we be reconciled to God through the offering of Christ and the action of the Holy Spirit.

Saint Ignatius Loyola reminds us, in the Spiritual Exercises,, that when we consider our sin, personal and corporate, in the presence of such a God, the spiritual movement that arises in our hearts and minds will be twofold: confusion and sorrow.

The experience of confusion is not an idea that arises in the mind. It is a felt awareness, a felt appreciation of the complete non-sense, the absurdity, of the choice to cut ourselves off from the One who has given us and continues to give us every good gift of creation and grace: how is it that I have replaced God in my life with the lesser goods of self, material things or disordered relationships?

The experience of sorrow for sin is rooted in the felt awareness of the destructiveness to myself, to others and to my relationship with God. There can be no profound appropriation of God's mercy, without a genuine felt grasp of the reality of sin. The Scriptures this month provide us with the resources for this journey of conversion.
