The Word is worth a thousand pictures.

You have heard the old saying; a picture is worth a thousand words. And in most cases the argument is true. What about the opposite; a word is worth a thousand pictures. The first word that comes to mind is Halloween.

When Mel Gibson's The Passion of the Christ debuted in 2004, it was met with mixed responses. Some were annoyed that a "religious film" was getting so much attention. Others were concerned that the director had taken liberties with the life of Jesus. For the most part, however, many looked forward to the film with tremendous excitement, especially those who were hopeful that the film might present the message of Christ crucified to those for whom he died.

For what it's worth, I've seen the film. Like many others who saw the film, in two decades it hasn't erased the mental images of the whip ripping flesh from Jesus' back, the sinister grins of the soldiers as they flogged him, the bitter defeat in Peter's face when he denied his Lord, and a bloodied Jesus, crimson-cloaked and crowned with thorns.

The movie was nothing if not visually disturbing, which brings us to the main point I hope to make here. Upon leaving the theater, one viewer remarked that many around him were saying things like, "Have mercy on me God, I didn't know! I didn't know!" Another said in an interview, "I've read the Gospels thousands of times throughout my life, but this was the first time I'd actually stepped into them."

You see, The Passion of The Christ is simply a movie. The images in the film that evoke emotional responses are meaningless without the significance attributed to them through the Scriptures. The words are where the meaning of what we see is found. This means, as moving as the movie may seem to be, the reading, hearing, and preaching of the Word of God is superior in every way. This is why, when it comes to knowing God and his salvation, a word is worth a thousand pictures—no, infinitely more than that.
