Sabbatical Reflections from Fr. Sakowski

Benedictine Stability

As I enter my final month of sabbatical in a Benedictine monastery, I'll continue reflecting on their threefold vow of obedience, stability, and conversion of life. Last time we considered obedience. Today we'll consider "stability."

Quite simply, Benedictine monks vow to stay in the monastery that they enter, unless obedience sends them elsewhere. Historically, monks were sometimes sent out as missionaries, or to be abbot of another monastery. But normally their promise to God included a definitive choice that this monastery would be their spiritual and physical home for the rest of their life.

We live in the FOMO ("fear of missing out") age in which people young and old spend much of their day avoiding solid commitments as they restlessly "connect" through social media. We live in an age in which people quite easily move from job to job, state to state, or marriage to marriage. Even when such moves are good and necessary, they are incredibly challenging for all concerned. Benedictine stability deserves our attention!

We can begin by naming what stability is not. It is not easy living with a resistance to change. Every virtue has its shadow side. This past Sunday I had Mass and coffee with a neighboring community of Benedictine Sisters. One of them wisely suggested that a great temptation in Benedictine life is comfort. Comfort kills. When we settle into an easy life, we will find ourselves quite unhappy and quite stuck. Comfortable living does not bring joy or delight. We can only experience joy if we are also open to risk and loss, to sorrow and death. There is no joy without vulnerability. Healthy relationships only survive and thrive when there is a willingness to make mistakes and repair the damage, to engage in difficult experiences, to work through healthy conflict, to admit truthfully what is not working well, and to move forward into the unknown with a trust that God will bring new life and new fruitfulness. The Benedictine vow is threefold – including conversion of life. Stability without conversion brings death and decay.

The true invitation of stability is an invitation to be fully present and engaged – with God; with others; and with one's own body, mind, and spirit. It is direct spiritual combat against acedia, sometimes called "sloth," which is not what most people think it is! Too often acedia is viewed as "laziness" – which is to be combatted by discipline and hard work. As a recovering workaholic, I can personally testify that we can numb ourselves with lesser labors just as much as with any other drug! No, acedia, the noonday devil, is the siren call that pulls us away from being truly present, to stop feeling what we are feeling, to disconnect from our people and our environment, to hide and isolate. Yes, that can come in the form of "lazy" escapes, but the noonday devil does not discriminate in his tactics. He simply wants to lure us away from soaking in the present moment in all its fullness – and all the better if he does so without our even noticing.

Today's restless FOMO culture is a prime example of acedia at work. FOMO ("fear of missing out") paralyzes millions each day, keeping them glued to their smartphones while sapping their capacity to be truly present, to notice, to receive, to savor goodness, to mature, and to bear fruit.

Even in the early months of social media and smartphones, I remember vividly a New York Times article in 2008, highlighting the experiment of an MIT professor with his economics students. They played a simple computer game, in which they clicked on one of three doors. Behind each door were real cash prizes. But clicking on one door caused the others to shrink, and eventually, to disappear forever. Instead of finding the door of greatest value and clicking on it repeatedly, the majority of students "kept their options open," terrified of committing to one thing only. FOMO. To continue the analogy, we might say that one large group today flinches at commitment for fear of missing out, while the "comfort" crowd will keep clicking on the same door even when it long ago lost its value.

Benedict begins his Rule with some sage commentary on these attitudes of the human heart. He discusses different "kinds of monks." There are solitary "hermits" (as he once was), and there are "cenobites" – those who live in a stable community life. But then there are also "sarabaites." Rather than surrendering themselves in obedience and allowing a community to correct them, they build up a self-made rule and a self-given salvation. "Their law is what they like to do, whatever strikes their fancy ... Anything they believe in and choose, they call holy; anything they dislike, they consider forbidden." Sound familiar? It is the attitude of so many towards religion and morality today – picking and choosing for ourselves that which is good, true, and beautiful rather than allowing ourselves to be changed by the living God.

Finally, Benedict discusses the "Gyrovagues," who refuse to settle down and tend to drift from monastery to monastery, region to region. They wind up being "slaves of their own wills and gross appetites" and "are in every way worse than the Sarabaites." At that point Benedict effectively says he should move on, because he has nothing nice to say.

In our age that over-exalts being "open-minded," the words of G.K. Chesterton come to mind: "Merely having an open mind is nothing; the object of opening the mind, as of opening the mouth, is to shut it again on something solid." Benedictines understand that. They find the pearl of great price, and they commit to spending the rest of their life steadily pursuing it in conversion of life. I'll consider that third and final dimension next time!

LIVE THE LITURGY

Inspiration for the week

"Hear, O Israel! The Lord is our God, the Lord alone!" This ancient prayer has been found on the lips of many of God's devoted servants throughout history. In its simplicity it reminds us of a timeless truth we often forget. We often worship other gods rather than the One true God and find all of our relationships distorted as a result. This One True and Eternal God who alone has a solitary claim on us and must be loved with all our heart, soul, mind, and strength. It is important that we remind ourselves often of God's primary place in our lives, lest we get distracted and sidetracked. But there is one more important piece that Jesus insists belongs with this. We must love our neighbor as ourselves. You cannot have one without the other. God's presence within each one of us requires that all of our relationships work together. This is at the heart of God's kingdom.

SAINT OF THE WEEK

St. Charles Borromeo (1538 - 1584) is most known for living during the time of the Protestant Reformation and helped influence reform of the whole Church during the final years of the Council of Trent.

Although St. Charles Borromeo belonged to nobility, he greatly desired to serve the Church. In 1559, his uncle was elected Pope Pius IV. He made Charles cardinal-deacon and administrator of the Archdiocese of Milan. At the time, Charles was a simple student, but because of his intellectual qualities, he was assigned several important offices connected with the Vatican. After the death of his brother, he decided to become a priest and was ordained at age 25. Soon after he became bishop of Milan.

Quietly working behind the scenes, St. Charles Borromeo is credited with keeping the Council of Trent in session and encouraging the pope to renew the Council in 1562, after its 10-year suspension. Afterwards, he devoted his time to serving in the Archdiocese of Milan.

Among his most important actions during his life, St. Charles Borromeo established seminaries, colleges, and communities for the education of candidates for holy orders. His emphasis on Catholic learning greatly increased the preparation of men for the priesthood and benefited their congregations. He died at the age of 46.
