PADRE PAUL'S PONDERINGS

The Importance of Civility Amidst Our Difference

In Luke's Gospel, we read: "Every kingdom divided against itself will be laid waste and house will fall against house.." (Luke 11:17). Jesus is speaking about the importance of having unity in our souls, as a demon is driven out of a person. He's accused by people who are gossiping about him and judging him that it's by the power of the devil He's driving demons out; He then makes the point that while a person may expel a demon, it can come back with other demons, but having God in one's life can help a person overcome this.

There's a lot that can be unpacked there, but it seems that even though this is an "off year" for elections, tensions are still quite high. For instance just last week, some protestors chased Krysten Sinema into a bathroom stall and another harassed her on a plane while she was seated. We're also aware of social media harassing too. And this isn't just for elected officials, but for so many of us "regular folks" as it seems so many have lost the ability to disagree or argue rather than become angry and tribalistic.

But all is not lost. Remember a few years ago, there was a video online of Ellen DeGeneres talking about some negative people who commented on her sitting next to President George W. Bush and his wife Laura at a Cowboys game in the owner's box. She came on to her show, and in a humorous way, said essentially we really need to relax more and accept that we have differences. She has a friendship with President Bush but neither tries to force their views on one another, and what's wrong with having friends who are different than you. Someone made the comment as they posted the video "this gives me hope for America."

No matter if there's an election coming up or not, there will always be differences between people. And differences are a good thing; but disunity is not. If we truly hate people because they are different from us, we're not understanding that Christ came to die for all, and that when we receive Communion it is meant to remind us too of the unity of all people as God's children; indeed "union" is a big part of the word.

So how then do we get to that balance where we can be different but civil? Where we can strive for unity while at the same time recognizing it's important to talk about what we believe in and why and stand firm in our principles? For starters, something I go back to time and time again is the "personalistic norm"; it stems from Saint John Paul II who taught that being one is created in God's image, the only appropriate response to a person is love. And if we start there, so much falls into place. We don't look at a person for their body only on a computer screen as some kind of object; we don't look at a telemarketer as just an employee we can scream at for interrupting our dinner; we don't look at the teacher who gave our kid a bad grade as someone just out to get my child. We start by seeing the humanity, body and soul, and that really can help put other things into place.

We then think about how we respond to others. Anger is an emotion, but wrath is one of the deadly sins where anger gets out of control and we harbor resentment and grudges or truly hate a person. Arguing through isn't screaming; it's a way to understand people at a deeper level. Arguing helps us to understand the other person's perspective and maybe we can find common ground, but at least agree to disagree.

Third, with that common ground, why not build new friendships? One of my closest friends who I've known since I was about 11 or 12 is the polar opposite of me politically. We're very different people; he isn't into sports; for me sports is virtually the only thing ever on TV when I'm home. He likes a steak medium rare and no sauce or ketchup; for me medium well is as low as I recently called ahead to a steakhouse to make sure they had ketchup. (Think of me as the "would you please pass the jelly?" guy from those old "All Fruit" commercials). If we close people off based on politics, religion, etc., we could be missing out on some great people who could help us on our journey to holiness. It's not a horrible thing to have people in our lives who think differently, as it can teach us tolerance and the importance of unity.

Fourth, as they saying goes "kill them with kindness." If someone attacks you for your politics or faith, or they gossip about you, resist the urge to fight back with angry words. Rather remain calm and patient; try to have a conversation with them. Pray for them. What good does it to do keep upping the ante and trying to outdo a person or get them back? You'll go in an endless circle.

Fifth, as we argue, remember we do not have to be passive or fearful. Cowardice is the vice against fortitude, and we need to speak up for what we believe in. Next week for instance, I'll be joining some of our parishioners at the 40 Hours for Life event at Planned Parenthood to pray peacefully on Friday morning, October 22. Some will see us and be instantly fueled with hate; indeed the last time I was there a person drove by and just made an obscene gesture. But talking about what we believe in is important. Certainly that applies to the faith and moral teaching of the Catholic Church, but even in politics, I'd say be respectful, but don't feel like it's taboo to talk about because you lean one way or another.

Sixth, take some wisdom from Mr. Spock in "Star Trek" who was always stressing logic. Emotions can cloud judgment; if we just hate someone because of their personality without listening to their ideas, that's a problem. Hear people out especially in politics, and look at their ideas and platform and how it conforms with you, rather than just instantly react based on a person's personality.

Seventh, think before you use Twitter or Facebook. I was on Twitter but no more; it was just bringing me down and making me angry. I use Facebook mostly just for sharing photos. Never forget that it's real people you are talking to, so try not to tear down but rather to engage in discussion rather than attacks. Oh, and what you write will always be out there too for employers and friends and family to see.

And lastly, remember sometimes things don't go the way we'd like, but the sun still rises tomorrow and there will still be time for change. We have midterm elections in just a year. So when things don't go the way we'd like whether it's in the parish, in the country, in the larger universal Church, don't give up. Don't leave the Church or give up on America or a person because it seems things aren't going well or they'll never "get it." Rather, stay involved, stay passionate, pray for the person and about the situation, but through it all, be patient.

VOCATION VIEW

Jesus' life was the best "Job Description":
sympathy, mercy, service, compassion, total giving.
Life is so rewarding when one really lives for others, rather than just trying to make all people serve the self.
Do you want to serve or be served?

Every time I offer Mass, I am reminded that Jesus also challenges me to love all people, not just those who are easy to love, because His love was given without condition to everyone. May we strive to do the same and not let our differences destroy our souls and our relationships with one another.

Have a great week! ~ Fr. Paul

World Mission Sunday ~

October 24th

Next Weekend we will celebrate World Mission Sunday. Pope Francis invites the entire Church to support mission dioceses in Africa, Asia, the Pacific islands, and part of Latin America and Europe, where the priests, religious and lay leaders serve the world's most vulnerable communities. Please keep the Pope's missions in your prayers and be generous in next week's collection. Envelopes can be found in your weekly packets.

The Solemnity of All Saints is celebrated on

Monday, November 1st this year.

Though Mass is not obligatory this year, we will still celebrate this Feast day at 8:30 am.

A Reminder of Cemetery Rules~

Hello to all that have loved ones in our cemetery! St Joseph's would like to say thank you to those that participate in making these grounds beautiful. Cooperation by all is surely appreciated! At the end of October our fall cleanup will take place. All flower pot holders and Shepard's hooks that don't follow the rules (Maximum height of 42") will be removed and placed behind the sign for pick up. Any that are not picked up will be disposed of at the end of the year. This is to help the lawn crew and keep the cemetery looking beautiful. Fluegals and most garden shops sell approved equipment, and feel free to contact Pat Archer at St Joe's with any questions. Thank You!

*"Live potted plants and appropriate silk flowers are permitted during the period from May 1 to November 1.

Evergreen wreaths are allowed during the Christmas season, and removed by Mid-January"
