SPECIAL COLLECTION THIS WEEKEND

Due to the unprecedented needs brought about by the devastation of the attacks on Ukraine and the immigration of millions of victims fleeing the ravages of the war, Cardinal Sean has authorized a special collection to be taken up in all parishes this weekend. The proceeds from the collection will be sent to Catholic Relief Services, the overseas relief and development agency of the U.S. Catholic Bishops, and to the Vatican agency for outreach to the Churches in Eastern Europe.

"The Sense of The Senseless"

How many times over the past two years have we asked, or heard someone else ask, "Why?" Why is the Covid-19 pandemic lasting so long? Why are so many people dying? Why are nations involved in war? For two thousand years, questions of Good and Evil have plagued Christianity, and, for two thousand years, we have failed to find answers that satisfy us. Yet we can't stop asking the questions. We still crave an answer when bad stuff happens. We still look for formulas to do away with mystery and make sense of the senseless. I believe to ask "why" is to be human. We can't help ourselves; we want to understand. We want to make sense of the world. We want our lives to be logical, reasonable, orderly, and sane.

It seems, from today's Gospel reading, that people haven't changed all that much over the two thousand years since the death and resurrection of Jesus. People then, as now, discussed the latest news of death and destruction and tried to understand its significance. We do not know precisely what tragedy some people told Jesus about on the day that our reading originally took place. All we know for sure is that several Galileans were killed in or near the temple, by Pilate's soldiers, as they prepared to offer their sacrifices to God. Nor do we have a record of the tragedy involving the collapse of the tower in Siloam that killed eighteen people. All we know for sure is that then, as now, tragedy struck and people died and still other people talked about it, and tried to make sense of it.

As Luke's Gospel makes clear, the people who ask Jesus their versions of the "why" question already have an answer in mind. They don't approach Jesus with a blank slate; they come expecting Jesus to verify their deeply held belief that people suffer because they're sinful. That people get what they deserve.

Whenever bad things happen, whenever senseless things happen, the human instinct is to try to make sense of it. Why did my father die now -- Why was our son taken from us, why did God allow that mother of three children die of cancer? We all want to make sense of the senseless, we want to know why certain things occur, and that is often a good thing. For example, when a plane crashes or when buildings collapse, like the tower in Siloam collapsed, investigations are done to find out why, so that, just perhaps, such a tragedy will not occur again.

There is a way to make sense of the senseless, but that way, my friends, is not to blame the victims by suggesting that somehow God brought about their death, or whatever other accident has occurred to them as some kind of punishment. Jesus suggests that we make sense of the senseless not by condemning the victims of tragedy for their complicity in their own deaths - but by considering our own mortality and working to produce fruit.

The world is a morally messy place. The things that happen in the world are not subject to easy answers. Once we recognize the fact that prosperity is not automatically a product of righteousness and tragedy is not necessarily a result of sin, we may be tempted to conclude that God isn't really involved in anything that happens in this world. We may imagine God as a mere observer, passively watching the world, as Bette Midler sang, "from a distance." That's not the way Jesus saw it. God is a real player in the push and pull of life.

Let us pray – Father, you have taught us to overcome our sins by prayer, fasting and works of mercy. When we are discouraged by our weakness, give us confidence in your love. We ask this through Christ our Lord. Amen

Stay safe and healthy! I love you and I miss you!
