FULFILLED IN YOUR HEARING

He unrolled the scroll and found the passage where it was written:

“The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has anointed me to bring glad tidings to the poor. He has sent me to proclaim liberty to captives and recovery of sight to the blind, to let the oppressed go free, and to proclaim a year acceptable to the Lord.”

Rolling up the scroll, he handed it back to the attendant and sat down, and the eyes of all in the synagogue looked intently at him. He said to them, “Today this Scripture passage is fulfilled in your hearing.”

...Our Gospel reading...[speaks of]...the beginning of Jesus’ public ministry. He goes to Nazareth and reads from the Book of Isaiah, primarily Isaiah 61:1-2.

We must understand that after Jesus reads the scroll, he “sits down” to begin preaching. Rabbis preached sitting down, from the “seat of Moses,” so to speak. This is contrary to our practice, where the celebrant rises to preach. For this reason, Christians typically misunderstand the passage. When Jesus sits down, they think he has decided not to preach.

But precisely the opposite is the case. Sitting down, he signals that he is about to begin his sermon. There is a great deal of anticipation, because Isaiah 61:1-2 was a “hot” text. There was a great deal of “end times” expectation associated with this passage.

Among the Dead Sea Scrolls, we discovered a sensational document, called by scholars “11QMelchizedek.” From this document it has become clear that in the days of Our Lord, at least one sect of Jews (the “Essenes”) were anticipating the return of a savior figure they called “Melchizedek,” who was expected to proclaim a great Jubilee Year (see Lev 25:8-55) that would involve forgiveness of the debt of sin. The document 11QMelchizedek quotes from both Lev 25 and Isaiah 61.

In Isaiah 61:1-2, the prophet is indeed predicting that at some time in the future, a mysterious “servant of the LORD” will arrive, bearing the anointing of the Holy Spirit, and will proclaim the “Year of the LORD’s favor,” that is, a great Jubilee Year (see Lev 25:8-17) involving debt forgiveness, freedom for slaves, and restoration of families.

The beginning of Jesus’ sermon is sensational: “Today this Scripture passage is fulfilled in your hearing.” This amounts to a claim to be the “servant of the LORD” of whom Isaiah spoke, to be the “Melchizedek” that the Essenes were anticipating, the savior figure who would announce the great Jubilee.

But how did Jesus inaugurate this “Jubilee Year”? Through his ministry, which involved freeing people from the worst kinds of slavery: to disease and to the Devil. His healings and exorcisms are powerful testimonies to the Jubilee he has come to actualize. Furthermore, his bold declarations of forgiveness of sins—for example, to the paralytic in the very next chapter (Luke 5:20-24; see also 7:48)—are a release from the debt of sin, just as the Essenes had expected. The connection with “forgiveness” and the Jubilee Year was facilitated by the Greek language, because the rare Hebrew phrase qara’ derôr, “proclaim liberty”, was translated in Greek (the LXX) as diaboaô aphesis, “proclaim forgiveness.” Leviticus 25 has the highest concentration of the term aphesis, “forgiveness,” of any Old Testament chapter....

...So often the world hears the message of the Church as “bad news” about guilt and sin. Sometimes that’s the fault of individual Christians who limit themselves to condemning evil, and sometimes that’s the fault of those outside the Church, who distort or caricature her message, or willfully refuse to listen to it. Nonetheless, Pope Francis is doing an excellent job of cutting through the misinformation to stress that the Gospel proclaimed by the Church is the message of God’s mercy. Now that necessarily entails the recognition of our wrongdoing, because one who has not done anything wrong has no need of mercy, but of justice. The whole idea that God offers us mercy implies we deserve something worse, but he refrains from administering it. Instead, he offers us undeserved forgiveness and reconciliation.

In a very real sense, as we participate in Mass this weekend, the Scriptures are “fulfilled in our hearing.” The same Jesus who fulfills all the prophecies comes to us and is truly present to us in the Eucharist, the Word made Flesh. His healing power, and specifically his offer of forgiveness of sin and freedom for those held captive by evil, is still available to us, if we will have faith in Him and in his promises.
