A Sunday Reflection

How can we as sinners complete something that is perfect in God's image that is His son, Jesus Christ? He has completed our redemption fully, not in part, otherwise it would have to be repeated.

Christ's redemption for our sins is complete in that, in a state of Sanctifying Grace our actions and behavior mirror His will through us. What Saint Paul is referring to is the conversion of whom may be afflicted with sin among His Church and who can't act by their own will and require an intercessory act from others. We can suffer for one another's soul as well as our own. It is this act of self-denial and suffering called "sacrificial love" that helps us toward imitating Christ and becoming "Christ-like".

My child suffers from cancer. Why does God allow this to happen?

It is selfish to think God wants or allows this to happen without thinking that it is serving sanctifying a purpose of which we are unaware.

So many souls were lost in the natural disaster. How can they be saved now?

Souls lost to natural disasters serve to remind us of our mortality at any moment; it should wake us up from our spiritually unproductive lives and scare us into getting right with God.

We should also pray and suffer for these souls in an act of empathic love so that they might be saved.

If there is a God, He would answer my prayer by giving me what I asked for myself.

Sure. As though we really know what we need, we keep asking for things that don't bring us everlasting life. We should pray for the graces and gifts of the Spirit and for the fortitude to do His will even when that means choosing the difficult road.

Suffering and sacrifices are the investments we make into the Body of Christ in the world so that we may enjoy the Everlasting joy of their fruits with God himself in Eternal Life.
