Question: Do Catholic genuflect any other time then when they enter and leave the church?

The short answer is no, with one exceptions. But we cannot stop with the short answer or this wouldn't be a very interesting read for our bulletin. The only time Catholic genuflect is in front of the Holy Eucharist. When a Catholic enters a church they should not simply genuflect toward the altar. One should make note where the tabernacle is and genuflect in that direction. This also means that if the Holy Eucharist, is not in the tabernacle one should not genuflect toward an empty tabernacle. So what is the exception. In rare cases the Eucharist, is removed from the tabernacle in a church and housed somewhere else. If you enter a room, even if not a church, and the Holy Eucharist is present, one should genuflect.

Sacred Heart Parish Census taking place: Please check your Contact Information on Realm to make sure your Parish Records are up to date. A Parish Volunteer will be calling to request your church of Baptism if we do not have it on file. Thank you for your help.
