Building on What We've Received

I watch too much YouTube. More often than not, it's a big waste of time. But sometimes you can come across something interesting there. I recently watched an interview of the film director Spike Lee. He was asked by the interviewer to put together a list of films that he would recommend to anyone interested in film. At one point, he expressed his dismay at how often he meets young filmmakers who have never seen many of the movies on his list, which consisted of about 100 films – few of which were obscure, most having been made by well-known directors, such as Alfred Hitchcock and Martin Scorsese. As he went through the list, he noted that his own movies contain many elements from these classic films that influenced his own development as a story teller and director. Lee's point was that his strength as an artist was in part based on his ability to take something already-existing and build on it, so that it could help him share with his audience the insights he received from them about reality.

If what Spike Lee said was true about the lack of familiarity among would-be filmmakers with the great films of the past, then this could only have a negative effect on their ability to create good art. How can one make an excellent piece of art that expresses something true and good if he or she has never engaged the work of those who represent the best at that art form? Originality and innovation are overvalued as serious engagement with what has been handed down is neglected. This leaves us with a culture that tries to mask its shallowness with titillation and technique, because it does not know how to engage serious questions about human nature and life's meaning in a serious way.

The trend of devaluating the patrimony and traditions of our culture goes beyond the fine arts. Lately there have been many stories about universities shutting down their classics departments for lack of student interest and because these fields do not generate funds for the institution. The same is true for a growing number of departments of philosophy, theology, history, and literature, which are being downsized or reorganized. Being familiar with the best of what has been handed down over time is very important if we are to understand and evaluate our present moment. We call them the "Liberal Arts," because they are "liberating" in the sense that they are supposed to help us to see what a truly good life looks like and free us to pursue it. They help to foster the conditions for human flourishing. When we cut ourselves off from the wisdom of the ages, we become completely vulnerable to conventional wisdom and the "hot takes" of pundits that serve to manipulate their audience rather than seek truth.

A love for tradition is particularly important for us as Catholics. To live as a Catholic involves the cultivation of a Catholic imagination, to see ourselves as part of something much bigger than ourselves and the current moment. It is to be steeped in the Sacred Scriptures and to be familiar with our artistic, architectural, and musical patrimony. It is to pray the prayers that our ancestors prayed to the Incarnate God who created and redeemed us, and whom we continue to worship together in the sacred liturgy. Catholicism is not a relic, frozen in amber. Nor is it supposed to be an ever-changing movement, untethered from the past in order to follow the spirit of the age into some unknown future. It is a living tradition, strengthened and enriched by what we have received from its having been lived out in different cultures over the course of millennia, and forever preserved in Truth by the Holy Spirit. It is an awesome thing to be a part of. And it should fill us with humble confidence as we accept our role as heirs of the Faith, who are now responsible for the work of evangelization – to build upon and share what we have received from those who came before us.

In Christ,
Fr. John

Prayer to Saint Michael the Archangel

St. Michael the Archangel, defend us in battle.
Be our defense against the wickedness and snares of the Devil.
May God rebuke him, we humbly pray, and do thou,
O Prince of the heavenly host,
by the power of God, cast into hell Satan,
and all the evil spirits, who prowl about the world
seeking the ruin of souls.
Amen.

Introit: God in His holy habitation; He is the God that maketh men to be of one mind in a house; He will give strength and fortitude to His people. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son and to the Holy Spirit, as it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be world without end.

First Reading: 2 Kgs 4:42-44

A man came from Baal-shalishah bringing to Elisha, the man of God, twenty barley loaves made from the first fruits, and fresh grain in the ear. Elisha said, "Give it to the people to eat." But his servant objected, "How can I set this before a hundred people?" Elisha insisted, "Give it to the people to eat." "For thus says the Lord, 'They shall eat and there shall be some left over.'" And when they had eaten, there was some left over, as the Lord had said.

Responsorial Psalm: The hand of the Lord feeds us: He answers all our needs.

Second Reading: Eph 4:1-6

Brothers and sisters: I, a prisoner for the Lord, urge you to live in a manner worthy of the call you have received, with all humility and gentleness, with patience, bearing with one another through love, striving to preserve the unity of the spirit through the bond of peace: one body and one Spirit, as you were also called to the one hope of your call; one Lord, one faith, one baptism; one God and Father of all, who is over all and through all and in all.

Gospel: Lk 7:16

Jesus went across the Sea of Galilee. A large crowd followed Him, because they saw the signs He was performing on the sick. Jesus went up on the mountain, and there He sat down with his disciples. The Jewish feast of Passover was near. When Jesus raised His eyes and saw that a large crowd was coming to Him, He said to Philip, "Where can we buy enough food for them to eat?" He said this to test him, because He Himself knew what He was going to do. Philip answered Him, "Two hundred days' wages worth of food would not be enough for each of them to have a little." One of his disciples, Andrew, the brother of Simon Peter, said to Him, "There is a boy here who has five barley loaves and two fish; but what good are these for so many?" Jesus said, "Have the people recline." Now there was a great deal of grass in that place. So the men reclined, about five thousand in number. Then Jesus took the loaves, gave thanks, and distributed them to those who were reclining, and also as much of the fish as they wanted. When they had had their fill, He said to His disciples, "Gather the fragments left over, so that nothing will be wasted." So they collected them, and filled twelve wicker baskets with fragments from the five barley loaves that had been more than they could eat. When the people saw the sign He had done, they said, "This is truly the Prophet, the one who is to come into the world." Since Jesus knew that they were going to come and carry Him off to make Him king, He withdrew again to the mountain alone.

Communion Antiphon: Honor the Lord with your wealth and with first fruits of all your produce.

A Tale of Two Cities by Charles Dickens

In this exciting novel set during the French Revolution, Charles Dickens expresses sympathy for the downtrodden poor and their outrage at the self-indulgent aristocracy.

But Dickens is no friend of the vengeful mob that storms the Bastille and cheers the guillotine. As with all of his stories, his passion is for the unforgettable and unrepeatable individuals he creates. The sorrows of the suffering masses, their demands for justice, and the indiscriminate fury they unleash take flesh in Madame Defarge, while the self-sacrifice that is the truest means of atonement and rebirth is manifested in the unlikely hero Sydney Carton.

In A Tale of Two Cities, humanity does not show its best side in the mean streets of Paris or even London, but in the intimate circle of loyal friends that gathers around the honorable Doctor Manette and his lovely daughter, Lucie.

Edited by Michael Aeschliman.

The CHOSEN

Zoom Meetings are
Tuesdays at 7:15 p.m.
August 3, 17, 31

Have you watched the series, "The CHOSEN"? Director Dallas Jenkins's new original series, "The CHOSEN" offers us a glimpse into what the daily life of Jesus and his disciples might have looked like 2,000 years ago. The production quality of the series is impressive; the writing, acting and musical score all add to encountering Jesus, fully Human and fully Divine.

Using "The CHOSEN" as a starting point, the bible study will watch the first season together and discuss the life of Jesus and his disciples. We'll acknowledge where liberty has been granted in the production and how seeing the bible come to life has increased our faith and love of the bible.

There is no cost to join, just RSVP to receive the ZOOM link.

Please contact Vicki Alton
