Pastor's Column

Next month there are two conferences being held in the Miami Archdiocese that I will be attending—a virtual participation via the internet in the first conference and a physical attendance in the second. The first of the two is the annual Catholic Stewardship Conference which will be held in Orlando, Florida. The second, the annual Catholic Cemetery Conference convention will be held in Miami. I take part in these conferences because I want to continue to learn what I and the parish can do to be a more effective and joyful community of Faith. The Archbishop of Miami is the Most Rev. Thomas Wenski and he will be present at both conferences. This week, I want to share with you Archbishop Wenski's thoughts on Catholic Stewardship, and how the attitude of a Christian Steward can be a guide for us all. First I want to remind you of the definition of a Catholic Steward: "One who receives God's gifts gratefully, cherishes them and tends them in a responsible manner, shares them in justice and love with all, and returns them with increase to the Lord." Now, here is the message of Archbishop Wenski: "When I was a student at Sacred Heart School in Lake Worth, Florida, where I grew up, the sisters had us write JMJ on all our papers and homework assignments. JMJ stood for Jesus, Mary and Joseph. The sisters wanted us to understand that everything we do should be a prayer—the lifting up of our minds and hearts to God—even homework, and so: JMJ, Jesus, Mary and Joseph. "Likewise, stewardship is born of and sustained by prayer. The sisters also had us write AMDG—Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam—for the Greater Glory of God. They also wanted us to give our best effort, because you don't give God much glory unless you give your very best.

"Incumbent on each one of us, then, is the need to be better disciples by growing in our personal, living relationship with Christ, and the need to be better missionaries by leading by example our fellow brothers and sisters to a new experience of holiness and abundant life in Christ. The good steward is a missionary disciple who shares God's love, by selflessly contributing his or her time, talent and treasure, and in doing so offers future of hope to all, especially to those most in need. "Stewardship calls us to be both committed disciples and coherent missionaries, accountable to the Lord for the gifts he has given us. As stewards, we share what we have experienced in the lived intimacy of our communion with Christ so that others may experience the joy of knowing him. As Teresa of Avila said, "Christ has no body now but yours." Today, it is through our eyes that Christ looks with compassion on this world; it is with our feet that he walks to do good, with our hands that he blesses the entire world. "If we think of stewardship as being about an annual local fundraiser or a tithing program, we sell it, and ourselves, short. Stewardship would then become a burden rather than helping us to discover the joy of giving, which again in the words of the Fathers of the Second Vatican Council, is the way, the only way, we will realize ourselves fully as human beings and thus respond to our baptismal vocation to holiness by becoming the people God meant us to be. "In the end, to be a Christian is not a burden, it is a gift; and to know Jesus Christ is the best thing that has ever happened to us; and using our time, talent and treasure to share him with others is a joy. Recalling again the words of St. Peter, consider the gifts you have received from God, and prayerfully discern how you as a missionary disciple use your gifts of time, talent and treasure to advance the mission of our Church. I pray that your experience of stewardship will be, for you, a joy, a grace, a treasure received and shared."
