O Lord, that I may see

By Felix O'Neill

O Lord, that I may see!
cried out the blind man by the way.
My lids are locked as dark as night against the light of day
O why let others see Thee pass, and hide Thy Face from Me?
O grant me, Lord, one glimpse of light to see Thy works and Thee

The crowd that filled the busy street was hushed in breathless thrill;
The Voice that calmed the tempest when it bade the waves "Be still;"
The Voice that on creation's morn cried out "Let there be light" Rang loud above the anxious throng:
"Thy faith hath brought thee sight."

Then straightway fell the scales of night
as from the eyes of Saul.
God's glories flashed before the blind
'mid thankful cheers of all.
The first and fairest view to greet those grateful eyes of clay
When that blest Face they longed to see, which turned their night to day.

O God, if ever I go blind to footprints made by Thee
And grope in paths of darkness where Thy Face I fail to see O light mine eyes, and turn my steps from such a path to flee,
To tread the tracks Thy wounded feet have cut so deep for me.
