Pastor's Corner

Three words might come to mind as we read this weekend's readings. They are faithfulness, trust and consolation. Jesus' faithfulness and trust are unthinkable to someone filled with ambition.

Jesus' faithfulness is that of someone who would give their life for the love of others. His trust rests in the love he knows in the Father's embrace. It is with both of these that Jesus tries to impart the fullness of consolation to his disciples. Interestingly, Capernaum is a name that means consolation. The disciples had not understood what Jesus had tried to tell them, in this second prediction of his passion. On their journey the disciples tried to come to a state of consolation through human aspirations. They certainly had faith in Jesus at this point. The consolation Jesus offered them, that he would rise from death, was not something they could understand. Ambition rises to the top in the disciples' desire to fabricate consolation for themselves. Jesus, upon being seated in the house at Capernaum, begins to teach his disciples that his faithfulness is fulfilled in service, trust is in being as children in the Father's arms, and consolation is the gift of eternal life. He taught his disciples that consolation would come to them, not through ambition, but by humility. Humility accepts the life of God found in others, especially those with little esteem in the world. Humility is a sort of gate that allows the indwelling in our souls of the life of the Trinity. This should be our most powerful consolation, that God is willing to share his life with us for eternity.

With my prayers, Fr. Kent
