

John answered them all, saying,

“I am baptizing you with water,
but one mightier than I is coming.
I am not worthy to loosen the thongs of his sandals.
He will baptize you with the Holy Spirit and fire.”

Hilario de Poitiers fue obispo de Poitiers y doctor de la Iglesia. A veces se le conocía como el "Martillo de los Arrianos" y el "Atanasio de Occidente". Su nombre proviene de la palabra latina para feliz o alegre. Además de su importante trabajo como obispo, Hilario estaba casado y era el padre de Abra de Poitiers, una monja y santa que se hizo conocida por su caridad. Su memorial opcional en el Calendario Romano General es el 13 de enero. En el pasado, cuando esta fecha estaba ocupada por el Día de la Octava de la Epifanía, su fiesta se trasladó al 14 de enero. Hilary nació en Poitiers ya sea a finales del 3er o principios del 4to siglo DC. Sus padres eran paganos de distinción. Recibió una buena educación pagana, que incluía un alto nivel de griego. Estudió, más tarde, los escritos del Antiguo y Nuevo Testamento, con el resultado de que abandonó su neoplatonismo por el cristianismo, y con su esposa y su hija (tradicionalmente llamada San Abra), fue bautizado y recibido en la Iglesia. Los cristianos de Poitiers respetaban tanto a Hilario que alrededor de 350 o 353, lo eligieron unánimemente su obispo. En ese momento el arrianismo amenazaba con invadir la Iglesia occidental; Hilary se comprometió a repeler la interrupción. Uno de sus primeros pasos fue asegurar la excomunión, por parte de los de la jerarquía galicana que aún permanecían cristianos ortodoxos. Casi al mismo tiempo, Hilario escribió al emperador Constancio II una protesta contra las persecuciones con las que los arrianos habían tratado de aplastar a sus oponentes. Hilary pasó casi cuatro años en el exilio, aunque las razones de este destierro siguen siendo oscuras. La explicación tradicional es que Hilario fue exiliado por negarse a suscribir la condena de Atanasio y la fe nicena. Más recientemente, varios estudiosos han sugerido que la oposición política a Constancio y el apoyo al usurpador Silvano pueden haber llevado al exilio de Hilario. Mientras estaba en Frigia, sin embargo, continuó gobernando su diócesis, además de escribir dos de las más importantes de sus contribuciones a la teología dogmática y polémica: el De synodis o De fide Orientalium, una epístola dirigida en 358 a los obispos semi-arrianos, en el análisis de las opiniones de los obispos orientales sobre la controversia nicena. Hilary es el escritor latino preeminente del siglo 4 (antes de Ambrosio). Agustín de Hipona lo llamó "el ilustre doctor de las iglesias", y sus obras continuaron siendo muy influyentes en siglos posteriores. Venancio Fortunato escribió una vida de Hilario en 550, pero pocos ahora la consideran confiable. Más confiables son los avisos en San Jerónimo, Sulpicio Severo y en los propios escritos de Hilario. [14] El Papa Pío IX lo reconoció formalmente como Universae Ecclesiae Doctor en 1851.

Almighty God, We stand before you in supplication, asking Your Divine mercy and protection, to envelop with Your invincible armor, our loved ones in all branches of the service. Give them courage and strength against all enemies, both spiritual and physical, and hasten their safe journey, back to their homes and families. If it be Your Holy Will that they be gathered to Your bosom, with the eternal vanguard of the saints, let their journey to Your everlasting arms be swift and painless, where they may stand in honor and glory, praising You for all eternity.

Hilary of Poitiers was Bishop of Poitiers and a Doctor of the Church. He was sometimes referred to as the "Hammer of the Arians" and the "Athanasius of the West." [3] His name comes from the Latin word for happy or cheerful. In addition to his important work as bishop, Hilary was married and the father of Abra of Poitiers, a nun and saint who became known for her charity. His optional memorial in the General Roman Calendar is 13 January. In the past, when this date was occupied by the Octave Day of the Epiphany, his feast day was moved to 14 January. Hilary was born at Poitiers either at the end of the 3rd or beginning of the 4th century A.D. His parents were pagans of distinction. He received a good pagan education, which included a high level of Greek. [He studied, later on, the Old and New Testament writings, with the result that he abandoned his Neo-Platonism for Christianity, and with his wife and his daughter (traditionally named Saint Abra), was baptized and received into the Church. The Christians of Poitiers so respected Hilary that about 350 or 353, [9] they unanimously elected him their bishop. At that time Arianism threatened to overrun the Western Church; Hilary undertook to repel the disruption. One of his first steps was to secure the excommunication, by those of the Gallican hierarchy who still remained orthodox Christians. About the same time, Hilary wrote to Emperor Constantius II a remonstrance against the persecutions by which the Arians had sought to crush their opponents. Hilary spent nearly four years in exile, although the reasons for this banishment remain obscure. The traditional explanation is that Hilary was exiled for refusing to subscribe to the condemnation of Athanasius and the Nicene faith. More recently several scholars have suggested that political opposition to Constantius and support of the usurper Silvanus may have led to Hilary's exile. While in Phrygia, however, he continued to govern his diocese, as well as writing two of the most important of his contributions to dogmatic and polemical theology: the De synodis or De fide Orientalium, an epistle addressed in 358 to the Semi-Arian bishops, in analyzing the views of the Eastern bishops on the Nicene controversy. Hilary is the pre-eminent Latin writer of the 4th century (before Ambrose). Augustine of Hippo called him "the illustrious doctor of the churches", and his works continued to be highly influential in later centuries. Venantius Fortunatus wrote a vita of Hilary by 550, but few now consider it reliable. More trustworthy are the notices in Saint Jerome (De vir. illus. 100), Sulpicius Severus (Chron. ii. 39-45) and in Hilary's own writings. [14] Pope Pius IX formally recognized him as Universae Ecclesiae Doctor in 1851.
