PACEM IN TERRIS

In April of 1963, Pope John XXIII released an encyclical entitled "Pacem in Terris" (or "Peace on Earth"). This came out shortly before his death. Every so often, I find myself returning to this beautiful and always timely teaching about the quest for peace. In his introduction, Pope John writes, "Peace on Earth--which man throughout the ages has so longed for and sought after--can never be established, never guaranteed, except by the diligent observances of the divinely established order." (#1). Throughout his reflection and teaching on the meaning of peace, we learn that it is only in God and his eternal will for the world, that we find our truest peace.

As he wrote, he opined that the world at that time was living in a rapidly changing scientific upheaval. Scientific knowledge was burgeoning and challenging our faith conventions, and threatening to drive us apart--the opposite of peace. The Pope spoke of how we are meant to live together, which implies each of us having rights and duties. He is quick to point out that with greater freedom comes greater responsibility. This is exactly what we teach our children! He numerates 5 inherent rights: 1) The Right to Life and to a worthy standard of living. Man has a right to live with bodily integrity. 2) The Right to Worship God according to one's conscience, 3) The Right to Choose Freely one's state in life, 4) Economic Rights--the opportunity to work, and to exercise personal initiative in work, 5) The Right of Meeting and Association, 6) The Right to Emigrate and Immigrate, and 7) Political Rights--to take an active part in public life, and to make his own contribution to the common welfare of his fellow citizens. Pope John was a man filled with wisdom and love of God and His Church. In teaching as a shepherd for his flock, he cautioned us that rights come with inherent duties. One direct quote from the encyclical is, "To claim one's rights and ignore one's duties, or only half fulfill them, is like building a house with one hand and tearing it down with the other." (#30). We live in a time when preserving our rights is paramount for many. People are willing to fight for their rights. But, we also must not lay down or ignore our duties to each other. This is the essence of the Great Commandment, which Jesus stated is the "most important of the commandments." Pope John concludes his encyclical with a prayer, "May Christ inflame the desires of all men to break through the barriers which divide them, to strengthen the bonds of mutual love, to understand one another, and to pardon those who have done them wrong." We know where true peace is found, it is found in Christ, the true Prince of Peace whom we welcome into our world and lives.

Second Sunday in Ordinary Time

That wedding that Jesus attended with his friends could very well have already gone on for several days. Weddings were huge events in the first century Middle East, as they are today. I imagine that Mary had been serving the guests. We see this part of her character right off the bat in Luke, when she sets out immediately, right after the Annunciation, to walk all ninety miles to visit the home of her cousin, Elizabeth. Why? Because she wanted to serve her in the last months of her pregnancy.

So we know this about Mary: she serves. It makes perfect sense that she would have been serving at the wedding, and, dreading that her friends be embarrassed, went immediately to Jesus and said, "They have no more wine."

This is funny. We get the sense that this Jewish mother knows her son better than he does. He doesn't know what all this has to do with him, but she does. She has known, from his conception--Luke's gospel, again--that he has "come to His people to set them free" (1:68). Did she know that he could turn huge vats of water into wine? I think she knew he would do far greater than that.

And don't miss this: Jesus addresses his mother twice in John, here and at the foot of the cross (19:26). Both times he calls her "Woman". Ah. Just like the eleven times Eve is called "Woman" in Genesis. The Jewish ear immediately understood that Jesus is telling us that Mary is the New Eve, the New Mother whose Son has come to redeem us from the Liar, the Serpent. Created. Abducted. Ransomed by the one who sets us free.

How will you work, in this new year, to "do whatever he tells you"?
