The Feast of the Baptism of the Lord

"You are my beloved Son; with you I am well pleased (Luke 13:22)." The final phrase from today's Gospel is the line that I pray to hear from God when my life ends. It is a beautiful reminder, that with the beginning of Christ's ministry, He too was baptized, and "claimed" by the Father in Heaven. By the descent of the dove and the voice of God speaking during his Baptism, The Father is setting Jesus apart as something and someone different from everyone else. He is defining Jesus as not a child by adoption, but as his child by nature.

As adopted sons and daughters of God, we share a participation in the childhood of God. Jesus, though, as the very Son of God, shows us the way and sets out for us the model and pattern that our lives should follow to be rightly called the adopted sons and daughters of God. Our lives begin with our conception and birth, but they are brought to fullness in our Baptisms. When we are claimed by Christ, we are being marked with an indelible mark from God as being one of His own, but what we do with that is important. We can either choose to accept and fulfill that call and mark from God, or we can choose to ignore and turn our backs on it.

How is God calling us to be his adopted sons and daughters in the world today? He is calling us to the greatest two commands (Love of God and love of neighbor). How we live those out shows how we listened to, understood, and followed the path that was shown to us. Though each of us have a different trek, our journey is one in the same. How do we heed the command of love, how do we share it, and how do we allow ourselves to be identified by it?
