“penitential pilgrimage” to Canada on July 24 through July 30, 2022, with stops in Edmonton, Quebec and in the Arctic city of Iqaluit, the capital of Nunavut Territory. Francis called it a “visit like no other.” The trip was for the purpose of apologizing in person, on Canadian soil, for abuses to Indigenous people and their ancestors who suffered from Catholic missionaries and from the cooperation by many members of the local churches, in the notorious government-funded residential school system. Wherever he went, Pope Francis apologized, begging humbly for forgiveness for the evil committed by so many Christians against the Indigenous Peoples and who suffered attempts to have their culture and identity erased. Pope Francis spoke his native Spanish and it was translated into English and into several indigenous languages. At one ceremony the Pope gave back the children’s moccasins that he had received from the Indigenous delegation that earlier in the year had come to the Vatican to see him. The moccasins were meant to represent children who never came home from residential schools, and the delegation wanted him to return them in person. At Sacred Heart Church in Edmonton the Pope’s chair at the front of the church was under wooden teepee poles. The parishioners sang hymns in English and Indigenous languages and offered gifts of a sash, quilt and artwork. Pope Francis said he was delighted to see the church community made up of both Indigenous and non-Indigenous people. In a news conference, Indigenous chiefs from four First Nations in Alberta spoke about what the Pope’s apology meant to their people and their gratefulness to the world for bearing witness to the historic moment. But there were mixed reactions from other Indigenous about the Pope’s apologies, and a smaller crowd than expected came to the Pope’s Mass in the outdoor stadium. The Pope explained his Canadian journey was undertaken “to write a new page,” and continue to walk together, always closer, with the indigenous peoples. He said that on the one hand, some men and women of the Church “were decisive and courageous supporters of the dignity of the indigenous peoples, coming to their defense and contributing to raising awareness of their languages and cultures,” “But, on the other hand, there was unfortunately no shortage of those who participated in programs that today we understand are unacceptable and contrary to the Gospel.” He said “In the name of Jesus, may this never happen again in the Church” He also acknowledged the Church’s wrongs of the past, and rejects the belief in colonization, and instead how it now promotes indigenous cultures.
