VATICAN CORNER

A Golden Rose is a precious and sacred ornament made of pure gold by skilled craftsmen, which the popes have blessed each year for centuries and have occasionally given out as a gift to show gratitude for Catholic spirit and loyalty to the Vatican. They have been given to special churches, sanctuaries, Catholic kings, queens, princes, princesses, famous generals, distinguished people, governments, and cities. St Peter's Basilica has five Roses, the church of St. John Lateran has four, and the church of St. Mary Major has 2. It is reported that for the period from 1096 to 2012 the popes gave out 139 Roses. Pope Francis has given out 7 between 2013 and 2021. All of those Roses went to shrines, with some examples being: Basilica of Our Lady of Guadalupe in Mexico, Black Madonna of Czestochowa in Poland, and the Sanctuary of Our Lady of Fátima in Portugal. In the year 1699 the Golden Rose was given by Pope Innocent XII to Amelia of Brunswick, wife of Joseph I, who later became the Holy Roman Emperor. The Rose was said to weigh twenty pounds and be almost 18 inches long. The day on which the rose is blessed each year is the fourth Sunday of Lent, and oftentimes that Sunday is called Rose Sunday accordingly. Rose-colored vestments, altar cloths and draperies are substituted for the penitential purple, symbolizing hope and joy in the midst of the Lenten solemnity, looking forward to Christ's death and Resurrection and bringing redemption for man. After the blessing Mass, the rose is carried in a procession before the pope to the sacristy, where it is put away until it is given as a gift. On the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, Pope Francis will pay respect to the Blessed Virgin Mary with a Golden Rose placed at the feet of the ancient Roman icon of 'Maria Salus Populi Romani' in the Basilica of St. Mary Major. That icon is the oldest Marian shrine in the West dedicated to the Mother of God. This will be the second time the icon receives a Golden Rose, the first was given by Pope Julius III in 1551. By this gift, Pope Francis is trying to strengthen even more the people's devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary. Sources: vaticannews.va, Wikipedia.org., newadvent.org
