Break-In and Burglary

Perhaps you have heard our sad news that we had a Break in and Burglary in the early morning hours of Friday February 16th. They broke in two doors and took off the door to our large safe and then stealing several chalices, communion plates, ciborium and other precious metal items.

We will be establishing a fund to replace some of these missing items and also to repair the doors, replace damaged safe and make more secure our church.

If you would like to donate please note your donation to the “Recovery Fund” If you want to donate a specific item we can give you an idea of what that price would be. Any amount that you donate will be helpful — Together we can help our church recover from this very sad break in and burglary —

We will recover from this together —

United as ONE church!

invasión y robo

quizás haya escuchado la triste noticia de que tuvimos una intrusión y un robo en las primeras horas de la mañana del viernes 16 de febrero. Rompieron dos puertas y robaron la puerta de nuestra caja fuerte y luego robaron varios cálices, platos de comunión, copón y otros artículos de metales preciosos.

Estaremos estableciendo un fondo para reemplazar algunos de estos artículos faltantes y también para reparar las puertas, reemplazar la caja fuerte dañada y hacer más segura nuestra iglesia.

Si desea donar, anote su donación al “Fondo de Recuperación”. Si desea donar un artículo específico, podemos darle una idea de cuál sería ese precio. Cualquier cantidad que done será útil. Juntos podemos ayudar a nuestra iglesia a recuperarse de este triste robo y allanamiento.

Nos recuperaremos de esto juntos.

¡Unidos como UNA iglesia!

VATICAN CORNER

Bishop Sergio Pagano the head of the Vatican Apostolic Archive, (formerly known as the Vatican Secret Archive) will soon be retiring. He has a new book-length interview entitled "Secretum" coming out that was compiled from his conversations with Italian journalist Massimo Franco over the course of a year. The conversations will reveal some of the secrets Bishop Pagano has uncovered over his 45 years working in the archive. Up until 1881 when Pope Leo XIII opened the archive to scholars, it was used exclusively by the popes to preserve the documentation of the papacies, ecumenical councils, Vatican offices, and Vatican embassies. The documents go back as far as the 8th century, and the archive also includes collections from aristocratic families and religious orders. Pope Leo XIII and those popes after him have agreed that the Catholic Church has nothing to "fear from history," and so have opened the archive to historians, however documents have to mature 75 years before becoming available for review. The archive is one of largest collections of historical, unusual, and important documents in the world, with 53 miles of shelving and thirty-five thousand indexes. Much of the archive is located underground in a two-story, fireproof, reinforced concrete bunker. Bishop Pagano divulges in his new book-length interview some of the unknown, lesser-known and behind-the-scenes details of well-known sagas of the Vatican and its relations with the outside world over the past 12 centuries. Examples of such sagas are Napoleon's sacking of the Vatican archive in 1810 and carting off documents to Paris, the Galileo affair, and the peculiar assembly of cardinals to elect a pope in 1922, financed by last-minute donations from U.S. Catholics. Bishop Pagano says that most recently, scholars have been flocking to the archive to read the documents of the pontificate of Pope Pius XII, the wartime pope who has been criticized for not having spoken out enough about the Holocaust. Pope Francis in 2020 ordered that those documents be opened to scholars ahead of their regular schedule so scholars could finally have the full picture of that papacy. The Vatican has always defended Pope Pius XII saying he used quiet diplomacy to save lives and didn't speak out publicly about Nazi crimes because he feared retaliation against the Vatican. However Bishop Pagano says "After the war, I would have expected a word more, for all those people who went to the gas chambers." Pagano attributes Pius' continued, post-war silence to his concerns about the creation of a Jewish state. The Vatican had a long tradition of supporting the Palestinian people and was concerned about the fate of Christian religious sites in the Holy Land if the territories were turned over to the newly created state of Israel. Bishop Pagano said any word from Pius about the Holocaust even after the war "could have been read in political terms as a support for the foundation of a new state. Pagano says the Jesuit researchers who compiled Pius' sainthood dossier did an incomplete job and never visited the Apostolic Archive at all and he believes Pius' sainthood cause should have waited until the full archive of the pontificate was catalogued and available, and scholars had time to draw conclusions. Pius' sainthood cause is now apparently on hold as scholars examine the newly available documents. Bishop Pagano's new book length interview will be published February 20, 2024.
