VATICAN CORNER

The Vatican and the technology company Microsoft have worked together to create a 3D digital model of St. Peter's Basilica. The model is available to see and explore for free at virtual.basilicasanpietro.va, and the website is in English, Spanish, French and Italian. The model is called a "digital twin" of the Basilica and it shows it as its present day view. However, the website also shows the location of the Basilica as it would look in its historic past. The present day model was generated using drones that took more than 400,000 high-resolution images of both the inside and outside of the structure, and the images were joined together using advanced photogrammetry techniques and the latest in artificial intelligence. Microsoft's Vice Chair and President Brad Smith said at a press conference that "It is literally one of the most technologically advanced and sophisticated projects of its kind that has ever been pursued." The digital model will give people who may never have the opportunity to visit the Vatican, to now experience the beauty, history and spiritual significance of one of the most important churches in the world. Smith said Microsoft will be launching an educational Minecraft game in January 2025 which will allow the player to explore the Basilica by using the digital model. Smith said he hoped that the Minecraft game will become a unique resource for Catholic and secular schools alike, offering new ways to engage with history and art. Also Microsoft will have two ticketed round theaters on the Basilica's terrace next year, providing an immersive in-person exhibition for pilgrims and tourists of the Church's Jubilee Year 2025. That exhibit will take viewers back in time to Caligula's first-century construction of a circus on Vatican Hill and the placement of an Egyptian obelisk at its center. The exhibit as well as the webpage will show St. Peter's tomb over the course of the nearly 2,000 years, from the monument placed over his grave to the original St. Peter's Basilica built by emperor Constantine, to the beginning construction in 1506 of the new Vatican Basilica where Bramante, Michelangelo and Bernini produced their works of art. Through 3D tours, online visitors to the website can navigate to areas of the Basilica that are typically off-limits to visitors, providing a close look at some hidden art, architecture, and history. Another benefit discovered of this new digital model of the Basilica is that the high-resolution images revealed previously undetected cracks, missing tiles in the mosaics, and other signs of wear that the Basilica caretakers did not know about, and so now they can repair. Pope Francis got a view of the new digital model on November 11, 2024, and he said the project was a way to recognize and continue to celebrate the Vatican's rich spiritual history. "It is a gift and a task to care for it, in both a spiritual and material sense, even through the latest technologies." Smith, Microsoft's chief did not say how much they invested in the project, but he said the idea came after Pope Francis urged technology companies in 2018 to come together to use AI for cultural purposes and ethical ways. Smith said they had also completed similar AI projects at Mont Saint-Michel in France and for Ancient Olympia in Greece.
