On Mercy

Be merciful; do the works of mercy, for those of sin abound. For there is no other resting place, no other way, where we may restore ourselves, and come to God and be reconciled to Him Whom we have so dangerously offended. We are to appear before His Face. There let our good works speak for us. Let them speak louder than our sins. For whichever prevails will lead us, either to eternal punishment if our sins deserve it, or to eternal rest if our good works have earned it.

Within the Church mercy is twofold. One is that in which no one need to give either of his money or his labor. The other is that which demands of us the service of our hands and the giving of our money. That which requires neither alms nor effort has its place in the soul: that you forgive those who offend you. The treasure from which you bestow this alms is in your own heart: there unfold it in the presence of God. Here no man will say: Bring out your purse, open your money box, unlock your barn. And neither will any man say to you: Come, walk, run, hurry, intercede for me, speak, visit, work. Remaining in the same place, cast out from your heart what you hold against your brother: at no cost, with no labor, you perform a work of mercy; by kindness alone, moved only by the impulse of compassion.

For if we should say: Give what you possess to the poor, we should appear to be unfeeling. Now however we are mild and easy when we say: Give from where your treasure is not lessened; forgive that you may be forgiven. Let us also say: Give and it shall be given unto you. In His Commandments the Lord joined these two together, and they describe the two kinds of mercy. Forgive, and you shall be forgiven: the mercy of the one who forgives. Give, and it shall be given to you (Lk. 6:37): the mercy of the almsgiver.

Eye Has Not Seen

They say seeing is believing. But if you've ever ordered a pair of pants online, you know that's not always the case. Whatever the photos promise us, what looked like a perfectly nice shade of navy blue on our computer screens comes in the mail as an unusual shade of blue green that only appears in the giant box of Crayola crayons.

The Apostle Thomas, who couldn't bring himself to accept that Jesus had risen from the dead without seeing him, is such an utterly relatable figure in the Gospels. Thomas is still reeling from a loss — not only of his good friend but his Lord, who was taken prisoner and crucified before his eyes. Thomas is guarding himself. He's not believing the hype. He's going to be the only judge of what is real and what is fiction.

Would any of us be any different? We've all had those thoughts. Can we believe it all — Jesus, salvation history, the Eucharist — when we haven't seen it with our own two eyes?

That's when we need to remember that those two eyes were absolutely positive they had ordered a pair of navy blue pants.

It's easy for us to sit back stroking our chins in judgment at Thomas, "you didn't believe the testimony of your friends!" But do we accept the testimony of our friends? The saints, the popes, the Church fathers themselves?

Sometimes the things that are most worthy of believing can't be seen with the naked eye.
