WHAT DOES FATHER FOX SAY?

My correct email is: stremypastor@gmail.com. Many people try to contact me at the main office email, stremy@roadrunner.com, which is Maria Hoehne's email address. As a result, it can take a few days for that email to get forwarded to me. Please use my email address for a faster response, and if you want your message to be seen by my eyes only.

Why be registered in the parish? A recent survey found that active Catholics who are older are more likely to be registered. For those over 30, it's 74%; for those younger, it's 45%. This should not surprise anyone. Once you are in your first long-term job, maybe get married, or at least buy a home, rather than rent and be more transitory, you will start thinking about registering at the nearby parish. But this raises the question: why should anyone bother?

Contrary to what many think, there is certainly no obligation to do so. Yes, I know some pastors may have policies, blah, blah, but church law is clear: if you live within the boundaries of a parish, you belong to that parish, whether you're registered or not. Now I've annoyed my parish staff, who really would like you to register, as would I! The reason is, if you don't register, the parish doesn't really "know" you're out there. You may well miss out on a lot of our activities because you don't get email updates, or maybe you are at a neighboring parish the weekend something important is announced at Mass or published in the bulletin. It's not a sin to admit you don't read 100% of every bulletin. (Now my staff is really steamed at me!)

There are lots of times I want to reach out to someone I usually see at Mass, but who I hear is having trouble of some kind — only to discover I don't have that person's address and phone number on record. I can't call; I can't write; and if I don't see the person at Mass, and don't know who his or her extended family is, I can't track him or her down. This is one way people "fall through the cracks" and then feel as though "my parish doesn't care." Not so: I care, and I've noticed, but I don't know how to reach you to help.

And I won't lie: if you register, you will get envelopes, and yes, I'd be very glad if you kicked in a few bucks from time to time. But I think you will agree, we don't hound people for money.

Seven new saints to be canonized in May. (This report is heavily drawn from a Catholic News Agency report.) Here are seven saints to be declared on May 15:

Charles de Foucauld was a dissolute French soldier who became a Trappist monk and Catholic missionary to Muslims in Algeria. Known as Brother Charles of Jesus, he was killed in 1916 at the age of 58.

Devasahayam Pillai was a layman from India who was martyred after converting from Hinduism to Catholicism in the 18th century. He will be the first lay Catholic in India to be declared a saint.

Maria Francesca di Gesù was the foundress of the Capuchin Tertiary Sisters of Loano.

Maria Domenica Mantovani was the co-foundress and first general superior of the Institute of the Little Sisters of the Holy Family.

César de Bus, Luigi Maria Palazzolo, and Giustino Maria Russolillo — three priests who founded religious congregations and institutes — will also be declared saints.

Mass attendance. The Archdiocese always asks parishes to track Mass attendance on Sundays during October. Our practice is to have ushers count attendance every single weekend, without exception. Happily, our 2021 October count showed a significant increase in Mass attendance above the pre-Covid 2019 attendance. (For obvious reasons, 2020 showed a drop off when we were observing various "social distancing" restrictions, and many people were staying home out of caution.) Consider this against reports that nationwide, Catholic churches are seeing — by one news report — a drop of 14% in Sunday attendance in the wake of Covid.

Universal Intention: We pray that people who suffer from depression or burn-out will find support and a light that opens them up to life.

Please take note of the following details as we prepare for Christmas during this season of Advent:

During the Christmas season and throughout the year, we would like to continue having live flowers on the altar. YOU ARE INVITED TO PARTICIPATE IN OUR ANNUAL FLOWER FUND by donating money toward the purchase of these flowers in memory of your deceased family members and friends. All those donating to this fund, as well as the loved ones for whom the donations were made, will have their names printed on a special bulletin insert. An envelope for this purpose can be found in your packet of church donation envelopes. You can also create your own envelope by including your name and the people you would like to remember through your donation. Please drop these envelopes in the collection basket, or drop them off at the parish office by noon on Tuesday, December 14.

The parents of any child in Kindergarten or first grade who is a registered member of St. Remy Parish and is interested in PRESENTING BABY JESUS immediately before Midnight Mass are asked to email Maria at stremy@roadrunner.com or call the parish office at (937)526-3437 by noon on Tuesday, December 14. Please leave a voicemail for Maria if the office is closed. Two names, one of a boy and one of a girl, will be pulled out of a hat. These two children will carry the statue of Baby Jesus up the aisle and to the front of church so that His image can be placed in the manger.

7 Ways to Have a Successful Advent

The following information was taken from an article written by Heather Kirn Lanier and found at www.deteia.org.

Advent is a distinct season, designed to help us quiet our hearts and wait in hopeful anticipation of the celebration of Jesus' birth. "The waiting we are called to do during Advent is not the busy, numbing, frenetic kind of waiting," writes Katie Jensen in A Sacred Journey, "but the stilling, germinating kind that connects you deeply with the present and your true self." I don't know about you, but Jensen's description sounds nothing like what I've experienced in most of my Decembers. My mailbox fills with fliers boasting huge bargains. Jingly commercials intrude into my living room and suggest that if I truly loved him or her or them, I'd buy this glimmering thing, this sparkling ring, this gadget unlike any other. Culturally, December usually feels quite noisy.

But Advent is meant to be a time of silence and listening. In the midst of the cultural noise, Advent is precisely what I need. And yet, the first time I attempted to "observe" it, declaring at the start of the season that this December would be different, I flopped. The frenetic energy of secular Christmas railroaded me. By December 25, I did not feel like I'd just observed four weeks of simplicity and quiet and waiting for the divine. I felt like a harried mouse who had swirled uncontrollably down a drain of consumerism and then got flushed. I'd failed because I tried to do both secular Christmas and liturgical Advent at the same time. Squeezing the secular expectations of Christmas into the regular work weeks had bossed my brain around, and there was no time or space for the quiet and prayerful reflection of Advent. That year, I realized that in order to deliberately enjoy the sacredness of Advent, I need to make a plan. If you feel like the "bustle to buy" is leaving you (and perhaps your wallet) empty, if you, too, feel thirsty for a true Advent, here are some ideas:

1.) Get minimalist with gift-giving. Rethink the cultural pressure to become Jolly Ole (Bag-Heavy, Toy Hauling) St. Nick, and set healthy limitations when it comes to buying gifts. This year's theme could be pajamas and scarves or homemade treats and earrings. You can curb your desire to click just one more Disney toy into the virtual Internet basket!

2.) Plan ahead. Confession: I love to shop. And I will always want to give every family member an individual gift for Christmas. But hunting for the best deal on a wool-blend sweater feels discordant with sitting in vigil as I hope and long for the fullness of life. Two years ago, I vowed to complete all my family's Christmas shopping before December 1, and I've continued it. This choice has been crucial in helping me cultivate a peaceful, prayerful Advent. If there are certain traditions you know you want to maintain through Christmas, like sending cards, try to get as much of the prep work done as possible before you light your first Advent candle.

3.) Let certain traditions go. In order to say "yes" to Advent's invitation of deep listening, you'll need to say "no" to some of December's usual busyness. One idea: hold off sending cards until New Year's. Kay Trafton of Vermont says, "It was the best decision ever. I spent the 12 days after Christmas day leading up to Epiphany to write out 6-8 cards per night and really was able to take the time to pray for the people and write personal notes. It no longer felt like a chore." Give yourself permission to postpone or entirely do away with certain expectations that don't speak to your intentions for the season.

4.) Try a new Advent tradition. Shopping and running around less will free up space for other traditions, and Advent has several gems to offer, from Advent wreaths to Jesse trees to Nativity scenes. You can purchase a wooden "Advent spiral," which combines the daily countdown of an Advent calendar with the candle-lighting of an Advent wreath. [Purchased versions of the Advent spiral are pretty pricey, but you can make your own with play-dough, clay, or salt ceramic and use birthday or votive candles; there are plenty of examples online.] When you light a candle each night at dinnertime, you can say a devotional together. Devotionals can include prayers, quotes by saints, songs—even activities.

5.) Give something up. Drawn to the idea of fasting during Lent, not as a form of self-punishment, but as a way to simplify and make space, I usually give something up during Advent, too. The first year, I fasted from buying anything other than groceries and necessary household goods. This allowed me to focus, not on acquiring new stuff, but on appreciating what was already present in my life. Last year, I gave up social media. I love staying in touch with people, but I wanted to experience a deeper sense of quiet and intentional turning inward.

6.) Take something on. When you give something up, you might be struck by how it frees you to embrace something new. What daily practice might enable you to listen to the stirrings of the Holy Spirit? [Journaling, taking a walk, praying the Rosary, Divine Mercy Chaplet, or Litany of the Saints every morning—the possibilities are endless.]

7.) Await Christmas...all 12 days of it! According to the liturgical calendar, Christmas is not just one day, but 12. While my family tries to keep the Christmas fever at bay through most of the month, we let it come barreling in on December 24. We celebrate for as many of the 12 days as we can. We loaf and watch movies. We dine on big meals. We visit family we rarely get to see. If you keep the Christmas music and cookie-eating and dinner-partying at bay until the evening of December 24, the 12 days of Christmas serve your body and soul as a well-earned feast, one that rejoices not in commercial goods, but in love and light.
