Blood Drive

BLOOD DRIVE, THURSDAY NOVEMBER 11th
12:00 - 6:00 PM ST BASIL SOCIAL HALL

Yes there is a serious blood shortage in our community. Having experienced this situation when my husband was admitted to the hospital. Tests revealed he needed at least two pints of blood, which the doctor ordered. The hospital said they were not sure they could provide him with one pint due to the shortage. Since my husband had several underlying medical situations, the doctor agreed to delay a possible transfusion for a day or so. We knew God was calling him and he answered the call the following day.

By his death, he helped save the lives of other patients who were younger and would survive. So please, if you are at least 17 years of age and in good health, consider making a donation. It is true, the lives you save could be your own at any time. We were both regular donors for years and knew the importance of this precious commodity. One pint of blood when its components are separated can help three patients.

Make an appointment by contacting the Red Cross site for St. Basil blood drive or you can contact me directly at 586-776-2471 or email me at maryaccardo@att.net.

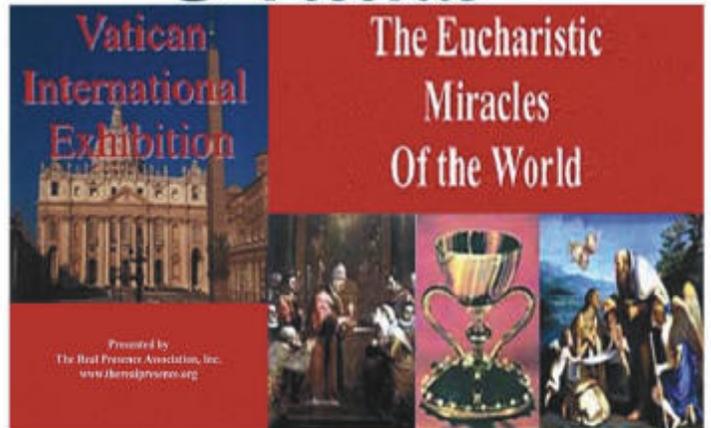

Be sure to bring your ID and rapid pass with you. All health and safety regulations will be enforced. Covid vaccinations are required by the Red Cross and you must be in good health. If you have any questions, feel free to contact me. Mary Accardo

Fr. Eric's Exposé:

The "Metaverse" Part 1

In this week's article and the next, I am going to share an article from Crisis Magazine (A Catholic online magazine), entitled "Christians, Beware the Metaverse" by David Larson. (<https://www.crisismagazine.com/2021/christians-beware-the-metaverse>) He presents a new life-encompassing technology from Facebook that could be very unhealthy and consuming. Here is Part 1:

"I try my best to temper my tech-skeptic instincts, but despite these efforts, I can't help but consider all the worst possibilities of the coming "Metaverse." In fact, the more I read about it, the more I think Christians should start preparing for it now, before we, along with our family and friends, are pulled into a life far from the one God created for us. For those unaware of this Metaverse, here are just a couple of recent updates.

This week, Facebook announced plans to change its name to "Meta" and rebrand itself as a Metaverse company rather than a social media company, betting its future on the importance of this development. Facebook/Meta also announced that it is hiring 10,000 people in Europe alone to advance this project. And Epic Games announced they are putting $1 billion toward building the Metaverse. So, what exactly is this Metaverse? In short, it will be the new version of the internet. Experts say it will not exactly replace the internet, it will just absorb it and take it to the next level—the "Internet 3.0," according to Ronke Babajide writing on Medium. Virtual reality and augmented reality will fully integrate with the world around us, they say, so we won't need to look down at screens all the time (that part actually sounds pretty nice). If a friend wants to speak with us, we won't have to read a text or an email or speak on the phone; a digital version of them—like a Princess Leia hologram in Star Wars—will emerge and simply tell you the message they wanted to deliver. If you're hungry, maybe a character from your favorite show (whatever those will look like) would pop up and suggest you get something from the new restaurant down the street.

To navigate this world, each person will apparently need an avatar, a kind of digital representation of themself. If you think the world has gone crazy with navel-gazing Millennials self-actualizing by "identifying" as whatever feels right in the moment, wait until turning from a man to a woman (or a man to a rabbit) just takes a click of a button rather than surgery and hormones. This description is from the Oct. 22 Vanity Fair piece titled, "The Metaverse Is About to Change Everything:" ...you could imagine wearing your digital avatar out in the real world, where other people who are wearing headsets see an augmented version of their reality, including you dressed up as your digital avatar, which could also change based on who is looking at you. Maybe you come across as a three-headed puppy with multicolored pigtails to your kids, but a professional in a suit to your coworkers. In this scenario, you could play a game of Pac-Man in the real world, running around trying to capture virtual coins that no one else can see, or evading multicolored ghosts who want to eat you alive. You could sit in a coffee shop in New York while a friend sits in a coffee shop in Paris, and both have a 'real' coffee together, even though you're not in the same place.

The way you will be fed these images, sounds, and other input will, at least initially, be through headsets and glasses. Ray-Ban, in partnership with Facebook, has created Stories, a line of sunglasses that look just like their traditional lines but can do many of the things your smartphone allows you to do, like take videos, talk on the phone, listen to music, and post things to social media. Zuckerberg is making these glasses, along with a program for business meetings called Horizon Workrooms—think Zoom meets virtual reality—as early efforts to contribute to this infrastructure. While a lot of the other early work for the Metaverse has been done by video-game companies, like Epic Games, Babajide says, "The Metaverse won't be a game world. It'll never 'reset' or 'pause' or 'end,' it'll go on indefinitely like the real world. It'll be synchronized with our real world and there will be no limit to the 'users' of this digital world." This is what Zuckerberg said, too, in his comments about the Ray-Ban Stories: "You don't have to choose between being on your device or being fully present. We believe that this is an important step on the road to developing the ultimate augmented reality glasses.... Imagine seeing holograms, turn-by-turn directions or being able to play chess on a table in front of you with your loved one 3,000 miles away, right from your glasses."

As a chess player, and for so many other realms of life, this sounds amazing. But my problem (or, if I'm honest, one of many) is the first part about not having to decide whether to use your device or not because it'll just be part of your continuous experience..."

Part 2 to continue next week! God bless!

In Christ through Mary,
Fr. Eric Fedewa

Musings From Mary Kay

Dear Ones,

Poor widows are the important characters in today's first reading (1 Kings 17:10-16) and the Gospel (Mark 12:38-44). In the reading from Kings, we meet a widow who is willing to give the last of her food to feed Elijah. God, through Elijah, promises that her flour jar will not go empty and the jug of oil will not run dry. Elijah, the widow and her son are able to eat for a whole year.

In the Gospel, Jesus warns the people to beware of scribes who go around accepting greetings (and possibly gifts?) in the marketplace, seats of honor in synagogues, and places of honor at banquets and then "devour the houses of widows". Jesus could never stand for duplicity. Jesus then speaks of the poor widow who put two small coins (worth a few cents) into the donation box at the Temple. Jesus stated that the widow put in more than all other contributors. They gave from their surplus but she gave from her poverty. We know that Jesus showed his fury at the money-changers in the temple. However, this Gospel shows us that it was not money in the Temple per se that caused Jesus' anger. His anger was a condemnation of those who used the Temple money for themselves. He denounced the scribes who used their religion for self-aggrandizement. What might I do to give more generously of my time, my treasure, and my talents?

I am writing this on October 27. In this morning's meditation, Fr. Richard Rohr, OFM tells us that the essential work of religion is to help us recognize and recover the Divine Image in ourselves and in everything else also. It is not up to us to decide who has this Divine Image. It is pure and total gift given equally to all. It is often the mystics who understand that "my deepest me is God!" However, we are all called to become mystics – in our prayer life and in our understanding of God.

The medieval mystic, Mechtild of Magdeburg (1212-1282) yearned for the soul's original intimacy with God. She was motivated by the deep desire that the soul return to its original being in God – just as it is the bird's nature to fly in the air and the fish's nature to swim in the water. Her intense love pours out in praise of God in this prayer:

O God! So generous in the outpouring of Thy gifts!

So flowing in Thy Love! So burning in Thy desire!

So fervent in union!

O Thou who does rest on my heart – without whom I could no longer live!

In the early 17th century, Francis de Sales (1567-1622) became Bishop of Geneva, Switzerland. In a time of deep religious division, he was known for his belief in "original goodness". When many spiritual writers were pessimistic about human beings, stressing sin and abnegation, Francis believed in the inherent goodness of human nature. Human beings have a natural inclination to love God. God holds us by this goodness as in some way we are linked to God. He refers to the "mountain top" of the soul, the utmost summit where self ends and God begins – a dwelling place that can only be reached by an all-transforming movement of love.

Have a blessed and joyful week discovering your true self in the love of God,
Sister Mary Kay Homan, OP

Sunday, November 7th 9:30 am - 6 pm

Speakers: Saturday 10:30am Fr. Eric Fedewa
Saturday 4:45pm Ms. Margy Nagle MA-Theology
Sunday 11:45am Ms. Sharon Amaya, RPA

Where: St. Basil the Great, Social Hall

You are invited to stop by Social Hall after all Masses this weekend, to view this remarkable exhibition. The exhibition was created by the Vatican in the Year of the Eucharist, Oct. 2004 – Oct. 2005. After being shown in more than 500 parishes in Italy, it is now traveling around the world and we are honored to host it at St. Basil this weekend. Take advantage of this opportunity to deepen your faith and grow in a more intimate personal relationship with Jesus truly present in the Eucharist. To help bring the exhibition to other parishes, schools, or other organizations, visit www.rpamichigan.org

INSPIRATION FOR THE WEEK

It all really boils down to a matter of the heart, and actions do speak louder than words. We cannot hide from the truth. A problem with religion is that it is possible for someone to make everything appear to be right when actually it is not. We can say all of the right prayers, perform all of the proscribed rituals, claim that we adhere to orthodox doctrines and still lead a distorted, empty and sometimes pitiful life. Only actions springing from true and deep sacrifice demonstrate true integrity. Without sacrifice, even the noblest looking actions can amount to nothing. It is no wonder, then, that the widow who contributed from her poverty received great admiration from Jesus. While it may not always appear to be the case, God has a special care and regard for those who depend upon him in times of trouble and want. Only the person who is truly poor is the only one who can see this. Because of a lack of trust, the one who has much is afraid to take a risk and sees only what they possess as their only security. ©LPi
