CALL TO HOLINESS

“Sir, leave it another year, while I hoe around it and manure it: then perhaps it will bear fruit.” Luke 13: 6-9
Luke gives hope that the fig tree, if cultivated and cared for, will bear much fruit. The gardener pleads to save the fig tree. With care, it could bloom! In whatever situation we find ourselves, however cut off from family and friends, however burdened by sin, we are surrounded by the love and concern of our God. Still able to bloom - we stand on holy ground. The holy ground of our faith community cultivates us, nourishes us and gives us every opportunity to bring forth the blessings that God intends as our fruit. This time of challenge has awakened us to what we truly need and as we journey on the Road of Renewal that our parishes will grow and produce much fruit. With the care of the sacraments, especially Eucharist and Reconciliation, we can bloom! With the grace of the scriptures, we can bloom! With the care of service to others, we can bloom! With the care of family and friends of faith, we can bloom! With a personal relationship with the Lord, we can bloom! With a willingness to take up our cross each day, we can bloom!

With Christ above all things... we can bloom!

WHY WE PRAY FOR ALL SOULS

The feast of All Souls, or the Commemoration of the Faithful Departed, is the day on which Masses offered are intended for the benefit of the dead. This particular practice seems to have originated with the monasteries associated with the Cluniac reform, and quickly gained momentum in terms of popular piety.

The theological reasoning that undergirds the practice of offering Masses for the dead is inextricably linked to the Church's understanding of Purgatory, but perhaps more importantly, to the Communion of Saints. The Communion of Saints insists that the dead remain in a relationship with the living, and both can intercede for one another.

This prayerful rapport is to the benefit of both.

The Communion of Saints also means that the Church is simultaneously a reality of earth and of heaven and the two co-inhere with each other in tangible ways.

Purgatory is presented by the Church as an experience of penance that takes place after death, by which the soul is liberated from the burden of sin, so as that we might more readily participate in the mystery of heaven.

Words like punishment and purification are frequently used as points of reference for what the soul endures as a result of the experience of Purgatory.

All this serves to demonstrate the long reach and inevitability of God's justice. To paraphrase the words of the Lord Jesus, “We will not be delivered until we have paid the last penny.” In other words, we cannot evade the consequences of what we have done and what we have failed to do, and that death does not alleviate us from accepting responsibility for our transgressions.

Mercifully, those enduring the penances of purgatory know that they will receive the grace of the beatific vision (the experience of purgatory is not equivalent to that of the experience of hell). The sufferings of purgatory are transformative, rather than merely punitive.
