Dear Parishioners:

I want to thank you for the prayers your offered on behalf of the retreat I had the privilege to lead for the soon-to-be-ordained permanent deacon, this past weekend. The Holy Spirit surely filled in for my deficiencies, and I believe that the experience was fruitful—it surely was for me. Along walks outdoors, we were treated to sightings of some osprey and deer. One night the sound of coyotes “serenaded” us (a little eerie, I found), and we are convinced someone in the vicinity owns a peacock!

I Want to take this opportunity to encourage you all, somehow to come to know Loyola Retreat House, in Clinton (near Green, Ohio)—a relatively short distance. It is actually the location for the 2020 Ladies retreat that had to be cancelled last spring. I am confident that the group will eventually resume preparations for such an event.

The following comes from the Loyola website:

Loyola Retreat House, Inc. offers you the rare opportunity to step back from life and be emotionally and spiritually renewed.

Come away...

For years, men and women have come to Loyola in search of peace and a deepened spiritual awareness. They have come seeking a quiet place to reflect and pray; to hear the word of God preached by an enlightened and prayerful staff; and to experience His presence along the wooded paths, or in the quiet of the chapel. Often, a little time away can give us new eyes, the ability to see life’s problems and challenges from a fresh perspective. The more hectic our lives become, the more we need to get away for solitary reflection, and there is no better sanctum around than Loyola Retreat House.

To the quiet...

Sitting atop a hill overlooking farm-land and lakes, away from the noise and congestion of daily life, Loyola is a perfect spiritual hideaway for the harried city dweller seeking serenity and peace. The grounds include acres of gardens, fields and wooded trails – all open invitations to quiet walks and personal, spiritual journeys.

I have a hunch that a good number of people may have an immediate reaction along these lines: when could I ever get away for a retreat? I acknowledge that it could surely be challenging. However, the more we are bombarded with sound—and frankly, I find a lot of it hollow noise—the more important it is to cultivate silence in our lives. True, one can find silence in other places besides a retreat house. However, it takes intentionality and some “planning,” and the existence of retreat houses in our Tradition is a great facilitator. Here is a quote from Mother Teresa:

We need to find God, and he cannot be found in noises and restlessness. Good is the friend of silence...the more we receive in silent prayer, the more we can give in active life. We need silence to be able to touch souls. The essential things is not what we say, but what God says to us and through us. Jesus is always waiting for us in silence. From In the Heart of the World

Even if a retreat is not possible in your life right now, may I suggest being sure to explore spending time in Eucharistic Adoration right here at Saint Mary.

Peace,

Small Teacher to Student Ratio – allows children to receive the individual attention they need to feel secure, supported and challenged.

Dedicated and Highly Qualified Staff – For kindergarten teachers, Mrs. Bureau and Mrs. Boyer, teaching is not just a job, it is a calling. Mrs. Bureau and Mrs. Boyer are experienced parents and teachers, They create a developmentally focused environment where they meet the needs of the individual child.

Family Atmosphere - Students develop strong bonds with their kindergarten classmates as well as across grade levels. Older students take kindergarten students under their wings as they work on a variety of special projects throughout the year.

Less Standardized Testing - As a private school we are bound by fewer standardized tests, allowing more time for hands-on, developmentally-appropriate learning.

Nurturing Environment – We provide a welcoming environment where your child can feel safe to try new things, make mistakes, and learn from them. Our goal is that every child leaves kindergarten with a firm academic foundation and love of learning.

Value the Whole Child. At St. Mary’s Kindergarten, we understand that your child is more than just a test score. We are committed to meeting students where they are and challenging them to grow socially, emotionally and spiritually as well as academically.

Faith Is Fully Integrated into daily lives. When Jesus reminded his disciples to “Let the children come unto me,” he was also reminding us how important it is to nurture our children’s spirituality. We don’t just learn about our faith, we learn to live it every day. As students grow to appreciate how much God loves them, they also come to understand that they are never too young to bring God’s love to others.

Team Approach - Parents are considered an essential part of the educational team. Many opportunities exist for parents to volunteer from home or inside the classroom. Parent/Teacher communication is highly valued.

More affordable than you think – The thought of tuition might be scary, but don’t let it frighten you away. Tuition assistance is available. You may qualify! Ask for information.

Everything I Ever Needed to Know, I Learned in Kindergarten – Kindergarten sets the tone for your child’s academic future. Take the time to make a thoughtful decision. April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month Gratitude from an Active Catholic and a Survivor

By Michael D. Hoffman

Editor's Note: The VIRTUS Programs recognizes the great importance of listening to survivors of sexual abuse. Because people who have been abused have courageously come forward to share their stories, we now have a better understanding of how to help prevent sexual abuse from occurring as well as how to address it appropriately. We offer our sincere appreciation for all survivors who have come forward to share their stories and recognize their role in helping to foster healing and prevention in our church. This article was written by a survivor about his own experience and how caring adults can work together to prevent abuse.

My name is Michael Hoffman. I am a survivor of childhood sexual abuse by a member of the clergy. I am 55 years old and I remain an active Catholic, despite the abuse I endured when I was a young boy. My wife and I are active within our parish. We raised our children Catholic and we sent our kids to Catholic schools.

Given the sexual abuse imposed upon me from the ages of 12-16 years old by a Catholic priest at the time, it is possible you may not understand my decisions. Typically, it is easier for many people to understand or expect a clergy abuse survivor to walk away from the Church. My efforts to find healing and hope from underneath devastating pain and sadness involves many people. It is also intertwined with the same Church who allowed my abuser to remain in ministry at the time.

A brief background:

When I was a young boy, I was sexually abused by my parish priest, who was a dear friend to my parents. He was also held in high regard within our community. Because my parents really trusted him, I didn't think my parents would believe me if I told them what he was doing to my body. I also felt they would think I was a "bad boy" for saying "bad things" about their friend. My abuser told me that what he was doing to my body was a normal way for two people to show love and affection for one another. Against that backdrop, I was unable to process the sexual nature of the relationship, my parent's expectations, or the family and social implications along with my own emotions and safety—an impossible task for any young child. I was 12 years old at the time. My coping mechanism was to keep it all inside.

I kept the secret until 2006, when I told my wife my story of childhood sexual abuse. I consider this moment to be my primary act of recovery. We had been married over 12 years at that time, and I had never told her or anyone my story. I didn't want to introduce, verbally, what I viewed as a sick and depraved history into our marriage. Initially, I thought she would think differently of me, as her husband, as a provider, as a father to our children. Exhausted from the inner struggle, I decided to finally tell her. With tears streaming down my face, hands shaking and heart pounding, I told her.

Yet, Kathy didn't think differently of me. She responded to me with compassion, love, and understanding. To be able to share my story, which I had kept secret for over 30 years, and still feel safe and loved, was such a profound experience. I believe God's grace was among us. Soon after that, I told my parish pastor and with his encouragement and support, I felt comfortable reaching out to the Archdiocese of Chicago, where I began the Independent Review Board process.¹

Sharing my story has gone a long way to bring personal, heartfelt healing to me and my family over time. Healing our church community overall—and remaining focused on protecting all children from any kind of harm—requires all adults to give permission to children to tell a trusted adult if something happens to them, and it is imperative for the adults to actually believe the child. When I was young, I did not have this kind of permission to tell my parents what was happening to me, and I certainly did not trust their response. As an adult, I've since asked my parents, given how our family was at the time, would they believe me if I told them? With tears in their eyes, they said no, they wouldn't have believed me. They said they just didn't think their friend, especially being a priest, would do such things to their little boy.

My VIRTUS experience:

My wife and I believe strongly in Catholic education, which is why we sent our kids to Catholic schools. Like so many parents, I supported my children and school by volunteering on campus. I served on the school Athletic Board. To be eligible to volunteer, I attended, along with my fellow parishioners, the mandatory training program, which was Protecting God's Children. To be truthful, being a childhood sexual abuse survivor, who was groomed by my abuser priest, and who was intimidated and frightened by his elevated stature within the parish community, I initially felt I had so much terrible experience that I could be the one leading the workshop.

I was wrong. The workshop was bigger than me and my personal experiences.

I discovered the goal of the workshop is to change the parish culture from silence to open discussion. I totally support this. My abuser had been able to take advantage and hurt me and other children because parents, staff, employees and other fellow priests were unable, or unwilling, to talk about it. Knowing my abuser thrived in the silence, I support an open dialogue that can help protect children from harm. Additionally, anyone who is thinking of abusing a child, to be sure, will have to consider the openness and willingness of our parish community to speak up and take action. Educating all adults who have contact with children in the best practices of child safety is paramount to preventing the abuse or neglect of children.

One volunteer, who happened to be a friend of mine, chose not to attend VIRTUS. He said he was unwilling to go and yet, still he expected to be welcome to coach—but, we would not waive our policy's training requirement and did not allow him to coach. It is truly unfortunate that my friend placed his personal pride over the well-being of children. However, I remain grateful that the program lives on in all of us, even without his attendance—for providing the foundation and structure to support an ongoing culture of safe environments for each and every one of us who do embrace the concepts of safe environments.

Healing

Although 1 in 5 women and 1 in 13 men² report having been sexually abused as a child, we know many, many victims don't report due to shame or fear, so the actual numbers are far higher. Given the truth of the abuse within our own church, we should be the leaders in hope and healing for all victims/survivors of childhood abuse—no matter who the perpetrator was. Healing came to me when my story was believed by my family, friends and my parish. Listening, hearing and believing when any person trusts you enough to tell you their painful story—that's the start of the healing journey.

The healing journey continues with prayer. At the annual Child Abuse Prevention Prayer Service³ held within the Archdiocese of Chicago, adults and children alike gather in prayer and song for the dignity, safety, protection and love all children deserve as children of God. The pinwheel is used as a symbol of the innocence, joy, and fun of great childhoods. Parents, teachers, principals, priests and other caring adults pray together, with the children, for continued vigilance against anyone who would harm children.

As an adult survivor of child sexual abuse, part of my mission is to also help other survivors on their healing journey. As a co-founder of the Healing Voices⁴ online magazine, I encourage anyone who has been abused to check out this resource. Know there is help. There is hope. There is healing.

I want to express deep heartfelt gratitude for the VIRTUS Programs and the daily dedication required from each of us to keep children safe in our Catholic school and parish programs. It is great to see people coming together fostering a culture of speaking up within the Church and in all communities—raising awareness that child abuse affects everyone, allowing permission for children to tell a trusted adult if something happened to them, and educating parents about grooming behaviors. It is real progress from when I was a young boy, and I am grateful for that progress. I am blessed to be in a parish community that supports and celebrates a safe environment for children so that no child will have to endure what I experienced.

Responding to the Call

Recognize God in Your Ordinary Moments

You know what are some of my favorite moments in Scripture? The little “Easter eggs” of Jesus’ humanity, thinks like Jesus falling asleep, Jesus drawing in the sand, Jesus playing with kids. And how about Jesus rising from the dead, appearing to his disciples and saying, “So, have you got anything to eat?”

It’s right for us to always keep in mind that Jesus is God. But we also have to remember that he was man. He got hungry. He cried when he felt sad and laughed when he felt happy. He got tired. He got bored.

Because he was God, none of those feelings ever led him into sin, like they do us. He never spent a car ride trying to pass the hours by seeing how annoyed he could make his older sister. He never smacked Peter over the head for saying something really stupid. But he did unleash some Biblically righteous anger on those traders in the temple, didn’t he? And he wasn’t shy about calling Peter “a Satan” when his friend tempted him to take the easy way out.

It’s the tightrope walk we all try to balance every day, honoring our human emotions while still answering God’s call to be better. Being perfect isn’t the domain of the Christian - that’s the domain of Christ only. Trying and failing, the trying again (and failing again) and again and again? That’s the domain of the Christian.
