PASTOR'S COLUMN

One of my favorite films of all time is "A Man for All Seasons" the historical drama about St. Thomas More who was honored this week on June 22, along with the English martyr, bishop John Fisher. The film does an amazing job presenting the political and religious tension in England when King Henry VIII declared himself head of the Roman Catholic Church in England and amazingly captures the wit, intelligence, courage, and holiness of St. Thomas More, played by Paul Scofield, who also portrayed the saint in the original stage version by Robert Bolt.

If you have a few free hours, check out "A Man for All Seasons". And the title of the film and play raises an interesting question? Why does the author refer to St. Thomas More as "a man for all seasons"? Thomas More despite tremendous pressure from his friends, from his family, probably from a number of clergy, from the king of England, not to mention the threat of torture and martyrdom, remained true to his principles and Catholic religious convictions throughout all the seasons of his life.

Whenever I watch the film adaptation, I am so deeply impressed by Thomas More's spiritual leadership in his family and community. He is a loving husband, a provident father, a fair employer, a lawyer who does not bend to corruption and bribes, a sound counselor, a learned man who saw through the empty philosophies of his day, and whose convictions informed his decisions. He is depicted as a "man fully alive" as Irenaeus would say, a man whose mind has been strengthened by reason and the Gospel, a man whose moral compass is firmly set on Christ, a man who stands for Truth even when bishops and priests cower in fear. And it happened. It's not just fiction. He was that great.

But that's what also makes him a man, not just for 16th century England, but a man for all seasons of history. His virtues are for every age. His stance on Truth is needed in every age. We need Thomas More's in every season. We need Thomas More's now. We need Catholics who will remain true to their faith despite the pressures of the world, their families, and their peers. Catholics of rightly formed conscience.

And when you watch it, you think, that's the sort of man I want to be, in every circumstance, making him truly, a man for all seasons.

May St. Thomas More inspire us by his life and assist us with his prayers, especially when it is our time to stand for Truth, for the glory of God, and salvation of souls.
