FROM OUR DEACON

This weekend, the Easter Season officially comes to a close. After 50 days of celebration, the Solemnity of Pentecost completes our journey through this segment of the Liturgical Year. Today, we celebrate the Birthday of the Church, the Descent of the Holy Spirit on the disciples of Jesus. The church is decorated in red to symbolize the fire of the Spirit. On Monday, we return to the "green" of Ordinary Time, spending nearly six months reflecting on the life of Jesus, as seen primarily through the eyes of the Evangelist Saint Luke.

In the wisdom of the Church, the next two Sundays serve to continue the festivities. Next weekend, we will celebrate the Solemnity of the Holy Trinity or "Trinity Sunday." It is a day set aside to reflect on one God, three Persons – Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. The following weekend is the Solemnity of Corpus Christi – The body and Blood of Christ. In both cases, the liturgical colors once again return to white, a reminder of the Easter Season. It's almost as if the Church just doesn't want to let go of the joy and optimism that come with the Easter Season and celebrates these solemnities to extend the festival an extra couple of weeks.

In two weeks, we will host the annual Eucharistic Procession from Saint Tom's to Saint Aloysius, following the 5:00 p.m. Mass on Saturday evening. You are invited and strongly encouraged to be part of this procession. This type of celebration dates back to the time of Saint Thomas Aquinas in the thirteenth century. The idea is to process the Body, Blood, Soul, and Divinity of Jesus Christ in a public way through the community. In some parts of the world, this event calls for special dress for the day, feasting, and celebration. There are countries and cities that recognize Corpus Christi as a national holiday, with all stores and businesses closed so that the public can focus on the presence of Christ in their lives.

This year, the Archdiocese of Detroit will host a Eucharistic procession of more than two miles through the city. Now, more than ever, we need to take the opportunity to ask Jesus to bless our town and its citizens as we acknowledge His physical presence in the Eucharist. When Mass concludes on Saturday, June 18, we will host a procession of the monstrance with the Holy Eucharist from our church to Saint Aloysius, where we will be joined by members of their parish for benediction and adoration. It is an opportunity to enjoy some fellowship with other Catholics and to honor our Lord with an event that only comes around once a year.

As we close the Easter Season, today is yet another opportunity to reflect on how we have been transformed by the past several months of Lent and Easter. What are some examples of practices you adopted that you will not want to let go of when the Easter Season ends? How will you come to know Jesus and His Spirit and how God moves in your lives in the coming months of Ordinary Time? I wish you and your families and friends a restful, safe, and blessed summer. Happy Pentecost!

IT'S A WONDERFUL LIFE

Eric Segall said in a tweet, "To be equal in society, women simply have to have the ability to control their own bodies and reproductive destinies. If you don't think so, then you don't want women to be equal with men. That's all."

Destiny Herndon-DeLaRosa, the New Wave Feminist Founder, pointed out how misguided this tweet is: "Abortion does make women equal to men. It allows women to treat the unborn as property just as men have treated us as property for centuries. So, you're not wrong. We'd just rather have equity over equality, with ALL people respecting ALL human life and no one being objectified."

The legalization of abortion essentially sent a message to women that since oppressive and abusive men could use them for sex and then abandon both them and their babies when they became pregnant, then women should also be able to abandon their babies. But abortion is even darker because its method of abandonment meant women had to kill their babies in order to be equal. But if women have to become killers to be equal to men, something has gone very wrong. Legal abortion hasn't elevated the status of women or led to political equality. It turned women into oppressors.

From our Tele-Health Counselor

Do you remember when “What would Jesus do?” was a popular phrase? It still is in some circles, but I remember in the late 2000s when everyone was wearing the rubber bracelets that had “WWJD?” printed on them.

The more I think about this phrase, the more I do not like it. The way it is phrased makes it sound like Jesus is simply a historical figure or somehow removed from our situation, who we recall to make a moral decision. It is the equivalent of asking “What would Abraham Lincoln do?”

The reality is that Jesus is not restricted to history or somehow removed from us but is present in every moment of our lives. This is even more apparent as we celebrate Pentecost Sunday this weekend. Jesus is with us through the Holy Spirit always and guiding us towards Heaven constantly. I think that a better way to phrase it is, “Jesus, what are you doing?” When we are faced with a difficult decision, where is Jesus in our heart at that moment? When suffering is present, where is Jesus in the midst of that suffering? This differently worded phrase, “Jesus, what are you doing?” has the language of turning to God and being mindful of his presence in our daily lives. Being mindful of God’s presence helps us to keep our identity centered as beloved children of God. I have found that this practice is helpful for all Catholics but, in a particular way, for those that are struggling with their mental health.

This week, consider reflecting on this different phrasing in your prayer life and see if it helps you to remember that the Holy Spirit is present in every moment of your day.
