The Efficacy of Prophecy

In Matthew 5:44 and Luke 6:27 we are told to love our enemies. The Greek word used is “agapate” (αγαπατε) or unconditional love. Love them as God would love his creation. But loving one who does evil deeds affecting us or others does not mean we forfeit the right to self-defense or defense of the innocent. It does not mean that we acquiesce to evil and its perpetrators with the Pollyanna (overly optimistic and naive) attitude betrayed by statements like, “Oh evil is OK. It will eventually burn itself out. There is nothing the people of God can do. Just ignore it and hope it does not come after you or the ones you love.” This attitude is often portrayed as reflecting a “practical pacifist” mentality. It is an excuse for inaction. It denies the traditional Christian form of pacifism that is decidedly active; and does not play the victim.

However, equally odious to the truly Christian person is the violent and absolute approach that says, “I hate evil and, no holds barred, I will seek it out and annihilate it; and anyone even remotely associated with it.” This perspective fits well with the ineffective mindset of the 12th century “Inquisition,” Such an approach contradicts the words of Jesus, “Turn the other cheek” (Mt 5:39) or the ownership of vengeance so eloquently stated in Deuteronomy Chapter 32. No, vengeance is like a breeder reactor, it produces more evil than the evil that started it. A violent or vengeful attitude can never (absent God’s grace and intervention) transform itself into that which is righteous in the eyes of God.

Yet another corollary problem is the definition and identification of evil. In our contemporary world, politically correct open mindedness requires us to believe that every human opinion has merit. People frequently retort, “Who are you to define what is right or wrong; good or evil?” I offer this startling revelation, “Truth is not an opinion!” God’s opinion is the only truth! Absent this axiom, there can be no rational morality or code of conduct. All casuistic law is dependent on some apodictic premise.

So if the extreme approaches bring no resolution, how do we love our enemy who practices evil and still exercise self-defense in hope of holding the evil at bay or disabling it? The answer from my perspective is not to be a victim or a vigilante, but prophetic. Every believer in God and Judeo Christian principles of morality is commissioned by baptism to point out the error and heresy of what I refer to as “contemporary amoral pacifism against evil;” in other words, to be a prophet. If you do not take a public and prophetic stand against evil in all its forms, you are by definition “complicit” in the sin. You must stand up and be counted as one who is empowered by God’s truth. Remember, God is watching and doing the counting; and His Church is counting on you.

Whether you are standing around the water cooler at the office, having a drink at the bar, talking to people at a picnic, or making a public presentation before a crowd with diverse opinions; rely on God’s truth, take a stand, and be a prophet. It may not be the best way to “fit in,” but it will make you ready and fit for the Kingdom of God.

“He Emptied Himself”

FAITH FORMATION

The liturgical season of Christmas is a joyous occasion during which we reflect upon the first coming of the Messiah, Jesus Christ. Perhaps we are familiar with the Christmas stories found in Matthew and Luke – the magi, the shepherds, the angels, and the lack of room in the inn. But there are also other profound passages of Scripture that speak of Christ’s coming not in narrative form but in a more directly instructional genre.

In St. Paul’s Letter to the Philippians we find such a presentation of Christ’s first coming. In the opening section of chapter two, Paul is trying to convince the Philippian believers that humility and unity are worth striving for. They should be “of the same mind, with the same love, united in heart, thinking one thing,” as well as “humbly regarding one another” (2:2). Paul suggests that the Philippians use Christ’s humble coming as a pattern. They are to “have...the same attitude” that Christ himself had (2:5).

This humble “attitude” can easily be seen in Matthew’s and Luke’s narratives of Jesus’s birth. What does Paul add to our understanding of the humble attitude? He begins his discourse with this statement, “...Christ Jesus, who, though he was in the form of God, did not regard equality with God something to grasped” (2:6). This is useful for Paul’s argument that the Philippians ought to take Jesus as an example of humility. Certainly none of the believers could ever assert the claim that they were “in the form of God”; Jesus, however, could.

Jesus had a natural right, so to speak, to claim “equality with God” because he is God! So if anyone had reason for assuming a proud attitude, by human standards, it was Jesus Christ. But he did not “grasp” at that equality. Often, because Jesus tried to keep a low profile, his authority was questioned by those who did “grasp at” authority – the scribes and Pharisees. “Tell us, by what authority are you doing these things? Or who is the one who gave you this authority?” (Luke 20:2).

Instead of asserting his rightful authority in the same way that his interlocutors were accustomed to doing, “rather, he emptied himself, taking the form of a slave” (Phil. 2:7). Jesus let his compassion and power speak for themselves (most of the time – think of Matthew 23!). St. Paul continues: “coming in human likeness and found human in appearance, he humbled himself” (2:7-8). During the Christmas season we celebrate Jesus coming “in human likeness” and in human “appearance.” Of course, the Church teaches that Jesus did not just come in human likeness and in human appearance; Jesus was human. “When the fullness of time has come, God sent his Son, born of a woman, born under the law” (Galatians 4:4).

This Christmas, may we gaze at Christ in his humanity and in his humility, for he serves as our pattern.

Making the Mass Meaningful

I frequently read good advice to help deepen my understanding of our Faith. One subject that I read about often is people struggling to find meaning in the Mass. Today's society attempts to gain our attention on so many different priorities, none of which keep us focused on God. Often, that transfers to our participation in the Mass.

If you struggle with staying focused on what is happening before, during and after Mass, consider the following points (with all credit to Tom Hoopes, a writer in residence at Benedictine College in Kansas):

1. Upon entering the church, start by saying a simple prayer. Pope St. John Paul II offered the following: "Mary is present, with the Church and as Mother of the Church at each of our celebrations of the Eucharist.' Through her intercession and at her side, help me enter this Mass more deeply."
2. Offer your sacrifice for someone. No need to tell them; offer your struggles to help them.
3. If (when) your mind wanders during Mass, look at the Crucifix or Tabernacle as you pray so as to meditate on the meaning of what we are saying.
4. Sincerely ask God to allow us to see and confront our sins that hold us back from experiencing the Mass more deeply.
5. We are human. We are distracted by the actions of others around us and judge them. What is happening in the Mass then? Try focusing on those objects used at Mass that are meant to be symbols of Christ: the altar, the candles, the vestments, the sacred vessels. They are designed to elevate the mind.
6. Are we listening to the readings? How does the Old Testament reading tell us about Jesus? Do we 'own' the Psalm, receiving its message personally instead of just responding? How does Jesus react to the world in the Gospel reading?
7. Do we offer ourselves up with the offertory gifts? A simple prayer we can quietly say is, "Jesus, I place myself before you with these gifts to be taken up and transformed by your grace."
8. Be present at the original sacrifice of Jesus when the priest elevates the host. Remember, time is endless with God.
9. Pray silently during the elevation. Simple examples are, with the Body, "My Lord and my God," and, with the Precious Blood, "Lord Jesus, Mercy!"
10. Before and after communion, pray! While in line, pray for our Lord to be with you as you receive Him. After receiving Him, thank Him for being with you and His sacrifice.
11. As you leave Mass, remember what you heard and received that you might share it with others.

Remember, as Catholics, we are called to take Christ into the world.
