Fourth Sunday in Ordinary Time

The Gospel continues the story of the beginning of the public ministry of our Lord Jesus. The reading last Sunday was the Baptism of the Lord, now we take up His life after the Baptism. Jesus begins to perform miracles but He also is a man who speaks the truth. Clearly Jesus has not done miracles in Nazareth and the people want to know why. When He tells them the truth—that they do not believe in Him—then they become enraged and try to kill Him. This is probably not the best beginning for a public ministry but this same pattern will continue until Jesus is actually killed.

Jesus does the works that the prophets foretold. By doing those works, He eventually angers more and more people or causes them to stop believing because they cannot believe all that He says. We can look ahead to his triumphal entry in Jerusalem, when so many of His followers believed Him. And yet shortly after that, when He is condemned and dies, almost all abandon any belief.

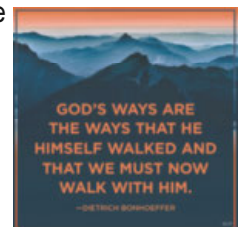

The Cross of our Lord. This is a stumbling block and causes all kinds of problems for people who might want to believe. The freedom of Jesus causes others to stop believing. Those who want to keep everything under control and not let anything unusual happen cannot believe. And you? And me? Can we believe? Do we believe? Are we ready to follow our Lord and die with Him?

We hear Jesus telling his fellow Jews that God often chooses people who don't belong to the Chosen People in order to show His mercy and compassion. This evokes anger among his fellow Jews. For ourselves, in the modern age, it seems that we accept that God can work wherever He wants. On the other hand, we find it difficult to believe that God really expects us to have a clear morality. We trust that God will simply ignore our actions that are not in accord with His commandments.

Very few people today want to proclaim the moral code proclaimed by Jesus Christ. Instead, many want to find ways to say that Jesus would have given a different teaching if he had lived today. This can only be a serious thought by people who really do not believe that Jesus is God. This is more and more a common way of thinking today. So many people think of Jesus as a good religious guide, but not divine. Thus His teachings can be changed into what we think that He would teach if He were here today.

We are invited to walk with the Lord Jesus today, to proclaim His divinity, to trust in His teachings as He gave them to us, to trust in our holy Catholic Church in spite of all of its failings. Let us pray for inner transformation so that we may be faithful to our Lord.

JESUS, I Trust in You!!!
Yours in Prayer,
David Caraway
