“Finding Perfect Love in a Troubled World”

By LORRAINE V. MURRAY

Fear is becoming a dominant force, as the pandemic radically changes our lives. There’s a poem by T. S. Eliot about growing old with the plaintive line, “Do I dare to eat a peach?”

Now we ask, “Do I dare to go to a restaurant? Hug my friends? Go to Mass?” We dance around each other, nervous we’re getting too close. We postpone visiting relatives who live in other cities.

How do we get through these troubled times?

It’s unlikely God will appear to us and proclaim everything will be fine. We probably won’t see the sky open and angels flying around.

Truth be told, the only escape from life’s troubles comes from surrendering to God, who is defined clearly in St. John’s Gospel: “God is love.”

God reveals His love to us, sometimes when we least expect it. When I told my cousin’s wife, Rachele, that my big fear is getting the virus and combatting it alone, she didn’t hesitate for a second.

“You’re not alone. I’m only four hours away and I’d come down and take care of you.”

Tears filled my eyes when she said that, because I felt God’s love so strongly.

God also shows His love through what I call the sacred moments of an ordinary day.

Each year I await the migration of the sandhill cranes as they fly in formation across the sky. I thought I’d missed them this year, until I went next door to see my neighbor’s new puppy.

As I was petting the little fellow and talking with my neighbor’s little girls, I looked up and saw the familiar lines of honking birds crossing the sky. The puppy, the little girls and the cranes composed a sacred moment.

Whenever I’m at the beach, I get up before sunrise, so I can witness that moment when the sky comes alive with a fiery glow. If dolphins are bobbing through the waves, I count them as a bonus.

God also bestows his perfect love for us in Scripture, which overflows with comforting words. “Don’t let your heart be troubled, neither let it be fearful,” Jesus said.

This means no matter what is happening—pandemic, economic distress, social unrest—Jesus offers peace that transcends these worldly events.

He also said, “In this world you will have trouble, but take heart! I have overcome the world.”

The world has always been filled with troubles, such as diseases, natural disasters and violence. Expecting our lives to be hassle-free is senseless, since suffering visits everyone.

One suffering comes in the form of fear—fear of illness, loneliness, job loss. St. John tells us “Perfect love casts out fear.” But what does this mean?

Human love is imperfect, which means the people we love will fail us. It also means loving other people can lead to great disappointment. As someone who lost the love of her life, I can attest to this fact.

God’s love is perfect, so it never changes and never ends. He won’t die and leave us alone. He won’t befriend us and then change his mind.

Only by truly realizing the extent of God’s love can we be healed of fear, but this doesn’t happen overnight. We have to catch ourselves every time the demon of fear strikes.

We might ask ourselves what lies at the heart of the fear. Often it is apprehension about death, which comes from lack of faith in Christ’s promises. Is death the worst thing that can happen to us? Our culture says yes, but for Christians the answer is no, since it leads to eternal life.

During these troubled times, we must turn to the Lord throughout the day and say, “Thy will, not my will, be done.” And remind ourselves of Christ’s words. “Take heart! I have overcome the world.”

We discover the heart of perfect love in the Eucharist and in Scripture. We also find perfect love in the sacred moments of each day. And through simple acts of kindness, such as the beautiful words: “You’re not alone.”

We extend a warm welcome to all of our visitors to our BEAUTIFUL AND HISTORIC CHURCH OF THE MOST HOLY TRINITY which was founded in 1810 and is the oldest Catholic Church in the State of Georgia. My Jesus, I believe that you are present in the Most Holy Sacrament.

I love you above all things and I desire to receive you in my soul.

Since I cannot at this moment receive you sacramentally,

Come at least spiritually into my heart.

I embrace you as if you were already there

And unite myself wholly to you.

Never permit me to be separated from you.

Amen.

Teaching Catholicism To non-Catholic Students

Teaching religion in Catholic schools sometimes poses a unique challenge, simply because not all students are Catholic. It is the job of teachers and catechists to teach Catholicism to all students, however, the challenge comes with trying to make the precepts of the Catholic faith relevant for all students, Catholic and non-Catholic alike.

When teaching non-Catholic students, it is important to understand the tenets of the other religions that represent your students. Even though the curriculum laid out by the Bishop of the Diocese of Savannah is the only one being taught, teachers need to know how that curriculum differs from the other faiths represented in the classroom. This helps them to know what knowledge each student may already possess, and what knowledge may be completely foreign to them.

There are some common differences between Catholics and Protestants in general. Protestants do not have communion at every service, whereas Catholics have communion at every Mass. Catholics have different beliefs about communion (Eucharist). Where Protestants believe that communion is a SYMBOL of the body and blood of Christ, Catholics believe the bread and wine become the ACTUAL body and blood of Christ when it is consecrated during the Mass. There are also some differences between Catholic and Protestant Bibles. The Catholic Bible has 46 books in the Old Testament, whereas the Protestant Bible has 39.

That being said, it's vastly MORE important for us teachers of Catholicism to know what we have IN COMMON with the religions represented in our classrooms. Yes, we are here to teach Catholicism, but our ultimate goal should be to bring these children closer to God. The catechists should always, in every single lesson, point out what is true across all Christianity, and what is strictly Catholic. They should also try to give all students ideas about how they can take what they've learned into their own churches.

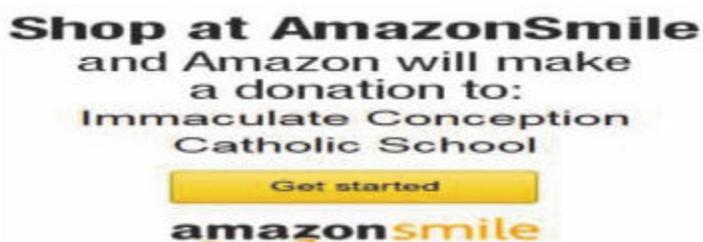

There are so many beliefs that we have in common with our Protestants brothers and sisters! We all profess a belief in God as Trinity. We all accept Christ as our savior and redeemer. We all believe that the Bible is the inspired word of God. We have many common prayers that we share. The list of our commonalities is vast and gives us so much to work with in class!

It is always helpful to know the common misconceptions people have towards Catholicism, so that, as Catholics, we are ready to speak to those as they pop up in classrooms or in everyday conversations. Always emphasize that we hold Mary in very high esteem; we honor her as the sinless mother of our savior. But we do NOT worship her as we do Christ. Learning about saints has proven to be a favorite activity among many students, but the teacher must remind students that, like Mary, we honor saints as examples for us on how to live holy lives, but we do not worship them.

Keeping literature on "apologetics" handy is extremely helpful. Apologetics is the study of why Catholics believe as we do. This information is especially important when questions pop up for which a Catholic might not have an answer. This is especially relevant with older students, who may have more questions than younger students.

Above all, we teachers and catechists must be respectful of other beliefs and faiths. It is very important that we teach our students to have that same respect. There is so much we have in common, and so much we still have to learn about each other and our beliefs! I think it often surprises kids of other faiths to find out that Catholicism isn't so very different from their own beliefs.
