ZACCARIAN APOSTOLATE OF PRAYER

That the thirst for evangelization, felt as a Christian duty, and the joy of walking together in fraternity may be for the Zaccarian Family the nourishment for daily meditation, as a source of energy to be able to overcome our selves and run like crazy not only towards God but also towards our neighbor, We Pray

SCRIPTURE REFLECTION

The twenty-fifth chapter in the Gospel of Matthew is unique—three parables addressing the final judgment and the end of time. Each one ends with some folks left out and the sound of weeping and gnashing of teeth. This is a chapter about our final destiny—eternal punishment or eternal life.

The end is always near—nearer than you think. Each day brings us closer to the end. The end of time or the end of our lives—does it really matter? Each is a finality that we can meditate on this week. How should we live knowing that a final judgment is near?

The first disciples of Jesus had the same concern. Jesus boldly proclaimed that the Temple was going to be destroyed in their generation. If that happened, what would delay God from coming as a final judge at the end of the age? And when will that take place? Jesus is careful to remind the disciples that they cannot know the day or hour. What we do know is that the Son of Man will come when we least expect him, at an unexpected hour. Our job is to be alert, prepared, ready.

One message of the parable is clear: We are going to have to wait. We are challenged to be like the wise virgins and take extra oil with us. That "extra oil" will keep our lamps burning so that we are ready to greet the Lord—the groom in the parable—when he returns to claim his bride, the church. Our own earthly life may end before the Lord returns as our final judge. In fact that seems more likely than not. In either case we have to be watchful and attentive to this reality: He is coming to judge the living and the dead. Once he comes we hope to be swept up into the reception and celebrate as the doors are closed once and for all. That is the challenge of this parable. At the end the doors will be closed. The finality of this parable is difficult to contemplate, but we must.
