I hope Marcelo Gleiser would not mind my entitling my reflection on the Holy Trinity with the title from his recent book, The Island of Knowledge. Now his book is not about God but about the limits of science and the search for meaning. Marcelo is a physicist but has some profound reflections that are in words the nonscientist can understand. He reminds people “that the appropriate reaction to scientific and technological progress is not arrogance but humility in the face of what remains to be known, and perhaps above all, what may always remain unknowable.” This even applies to the theological knowledge of the Holy Trinity! Although it gives us insight into God -- Father, Son and Holy Spirit -- one divine being and yet persons whose love is very real and of whom one became human to save us, we should make no mistake that it takes us to the shore of human understanding to perceive the vast sea of the mysterious design of God and his will for us.

Many of our greatest theologians have said that we can more readily say what God is not rather than what God is. God is not human, he is not animal, he is not vegetable -- He is God. Yes He is divine but divine is not human. While our belief in the Holy Trinity gives us real knowledge of God, His very being and presence are still shrouded in a mystery that causes children and even adults to ask questions: “How could He not have a beginning, everything has a beginning? How could He be forever? What does God do all day?” We are humans and we think this way….

We do not think as God thinks, do we? The bible says “His ways are not your ways and your ways are not His!” All human beings need to be more humble. Whatever form of knowledge we think is most important (scientific, medical, technological, theological) only lets us in on part of the mystery of the universe and the God who created it. We should be happy with our Island for it is all we have!

The First Sunday After Pentecost
Trinity Sunday

The first four Sundays after Pentecost are celebrated as devotional feasts of our Lord, officially called Solemnities of the Lord. The first of these is Trinity Sunday. There was a need to emphasize the doctrine of the Trinity when in the 4th and 5th centuries a heresy swept through the church denying that Jesus was equal to God. Before the year 1000 a special feast devoted to the Trinity was celebrated on the Sunday following Pentecost. It was formalized in the universal church by Pope John XXII in 1334.

There are several symbols for the Trinity. Since the 6th century, an older man, a younger man and a dove were used to represent the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit. Another symbol of the Trinity is a triangle surrounded by light rays with an eye inside. A version of this symbol is on the Great Seal of the United States and it appears on a one dollar bill. And St. Patrick used the shamrock to symbolize the Trinity.
