What Does the Catholic Church Teach About....?

Question:
I was asked, “Are we supposed to go to a particular church?”

My Answer:
Yes, in fact you should be going to a Catholic Church. This is kind of a difficult question to answer. The Catholic Church is the universal Church, so why should it matter. The question really is about parishes and parish boundaries.

The Church would like and highly suggests that Catholics who reside in a parish boundary so support that parish financially and would highly suggest that the parishioners of that parish worship together in order to form a community of believers for mutual support of each other.

So, what comprises a parish boundary? That is up to the diocese, but in general, the area is close proximity of the church building. In other words, if you live closer to a particular church, then that is the parish boundary you would live in.

What about if there are three churches in close proximity to each other and it isn’t clear whether a person lives closer to one or the other. Flip a coin!

Church boundaries aren’t usually that well defined. People pick churches for personal reasons. Maybe its family or a great choir or a great preacher or something personal. The Church would say that then you should commit your resources to that particular parish and to not jump around. Usually this would be the case with the pastor being moved and a new pastor not being to one’s liking.

Remember, it is the parish community that comes together. Priests and Deacons come and go. Even choirs can change.

In a world of lack of commitment, this becomes a problem when parishes are structuring budgets and providing programs to the parish. When the parishioners are in flux so to the finances and resources of the parish change.

A parish family is needed just like our own families. Support in times of need. Family that one can talk to and rely on.

Now, that being said, there is no restriction to occasionally attend other parish services or programs. Obviously, when traveling, we need to find a place of worship. Even here in our three parishes, there is nothing entirely wrong with attending a mass at any of the other parishes. In our particular case we are a close nit Catholic Community. However, each person needs to commit to the support of a particular parish community.

Are you registered? Are you registered, officially, in one of the parishes in the area? If not, it’s time to make the commitment.

Have a question? Let me know at thomassoper@shentel.net. There is never a dumb question. The answer may not be what you think, but do not let that keep you from asking.
